Chinese company to invest over Rs8bn in Punjab

A delegation meets PBIT chairman

By our correspondent

LAHORE: In a significant development for Pakistan's industrial sector, Modern Ceramics Sanitary Ware (Pvt) Limited, a leading Chinese company, is set to invest over Rs8 billion in Punjab.

The development emerged during a meeting between the company's delegation and Punjab Board of Investment and Trade (PBIT) leadership, held at PBIT conference room.

Chairman PBIT, Muntaha Ashraf, and CEO, Suhail Saleem, BoD Member, Ahmad Ali Tariq met with representatives from Modern Ceramics to discuss the company's plan to establish a cutting-edge manufacturing facility in the Allama Iqbal Industrial City (AIIIC).

This new facility is poised to not only meet the growing local demand for sanitary ware but also presents Pakistan as an exporter of premium sanitary products to key markets across the Middle East, Africa, and beyond. The investment is expected to generate over 500 jobs, contributing to local economic growth, while playing a vital role in import substitution.

By reducing dependence on imported sanitary ware, Pakistan will also save millions in foreign exchange, strengthening its trade balance.

Chairman PBIT reassured the delegation of comprehensive support, highlighting PBIT's commitment to facilitating the smooth establishment of the production unit through its dedicated facilitation wing. This move marks a significant step towards boosting Punjab's industrial capacity and enhancing Pakistan's standing in global export markets.

Nobody can be allowed to sabotage SCO, CPEC: PMLN MPs

LAHORE: Ruling party MPs in Punjab Assembly supported action against elements planning to damage CPEC and reach Islamabad to create disturbance during the SCO commencing today (Tuesday).

During the heated PA session chaired by Speaker Malik Muhammad Ahmad Khan a day before the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation summit starting from Oct 15 (today) in the federal capital, the ruling party MPs supported full action against those who were on a mission of sabotaging the summit or damaging Pakistan's interest. Sami Ullah Khan, the PMLN MPA from Lahore while voicing serious concern over the video message of PTI senior leader and former member of Imran Khan's cabinet Hamud Azhar stated if the intent to sabotage SCO was shown, the government was left with no option but to stop the miscreants from performing any subversive act.

Sami Ullah Khan, who hails from Lahore and served as MPA for multiple terms now went on to say that Hamud Azhar had asked the PTI workers to reach Islamabad on October 15, the day when the summit was starting.

He said the law enforcement agencies were left with only one option that unfortunately could also affect politicians with positive intent. Those intending to sabotage peace will not be spared' said the Provincial Minister Mian Mujtaba Shuja ur Rehman while speaking on the floor of Punjab Assembly. 'Show the courage and come out, we will not let PTI supporters exit Punjab' said Mian Mujtaba Shuja ur Rehman. He said the elements who wanted to hinder Pakistan's way to progress and prosperity would be dealt with iron hands.

Mujtaba went on to say if these elements were sincere to Pakistan, they should withdraw the October 15 protest call.

He said the heads of world nations were coming to Pakistan after 27 years, inflation was coming down, the economic situation was improving, adding PMLN deserved the credit of all this. Mujtaba went on to say that law would take its course if PTI launched any attack against the state of Pakistan. The minister said that in the tenure of Imran Khan, the CPEC project faced a delay, adding IK pushed the country towards bankruptcy but Shehbaz Sharif steered Pakistan out of crisis.

He criticised PTI leadership for their will to block CPEC and Pakistan's way to progress which, he added was not possible while Shehbaz Sharif was in power. He said PMLN and allies under the leadership of Shehbaz Sharif would take Pakistan on the track of progress.

Mujtaba Shuja ur Rehman, while grilling PTI leadership further, said that on the insistence of their foreign masters, they did not attend the All Parties Conference on Palestine. Only with the help of Gen Faiz Hameed and a few judges, PTI was able to win a few seats and in the next polls, the Goldsmith project failed again. Mujtaba also slammed PTI leaders like Arif Ali, Ali Amin Gandapur for provoking people.

Speaker Malik Muhammad Ahmad on the occasion remarked how could a member's arrest be averted if he was involved in subversive acts. Under Article 17, every citizen has the right to protest but if it is not peaceful, trouble could be invited.

The Speaker stated that protest is the Constitutional right but there must be some limits, adding if these elements were miscreants, they should be stopped.

Opposition MPA Ejaz Shafi while speaking on the occasion stated that this present assembly was a product of Form 47 whereas Prisoner number 804 enjoyed real mandate. He said rather than levelling allegations, the government should tell the name of the political workers who were against the state of Pakistan. He questioned as to why the PTI workers were not allowed to reach Islamabad. He said the PTI welcomed the Shanghai summit but its protest call was totally peaceful and constitutional. He also stated that PMLN would be wiped out in the next elections.

Desk set up to facilitate business community

Bureau Report

PESHAWAR: Sarhad Chamber of Commerce and Industry (SCCI) in collaboration with the Small and Medium Enterprises Development Authority (Smeda) has established a help desk to facilitate the business community with the financial grant for promotion/expansion through value addition of the textile industry.

SCCI President Fazal Moqem Khan and vice president Shehryar Khan inaugurated the desk on Monday.

Chartered accountant Muhammad Ahmad Shahid, Syed Ejaz Ali Shah, Kamal Mehmood and officials of Smeda were present on the occasion.

The matching grant is being provided under the Public Sector Development Programme (PSDP) of the Ministry of Commerce.

It is implemented by Smeda, aimed at providing financial assistance to more than 1000 stitching units to revive the textile industry.

Fazal Moqem lauded the announcement of a matching grant for industrial stitching units, terming it as a milestone initiative toward the revival and development of the textile industry.

The textile industry is on the decline under the prevailing circumstances, the SCCI chief noted, stating that several industrial units were closed which triggered unemployment in the province.

Fazal Moqem stressed the need for the announcement of similar grants for other sectors, including CNG and petroleum to reactivate the business, industry and trade. He said employment opportunities would be created through the promotion of economic activities and industrial growth.

The SCCI president asked the business community to benefit from the matching grant for expansion and improvement of business and industry.

He said that the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa government should also take such an initiative to keep the wheel of industry spinning in the province. Fazal Moqem demanded the government to announce a special fiscal relief package for sick and non-operational textile and other industrial units.

Later, officials briefed the SCCI chief about the matching grant.

Many members of the business community later visited the chamber and got information about the grant.

Another child crippled by polio

Vaccine refusals mount in Balochistan; 33 kids infected so far this year

By M. Waqar Bhatti

ISLAMABAD: Another child has been paralysed by polio in Balochistan, marking the 33rd case of the disease in Pakistan this year, Polio Eradication officials said on Monday.

The latest victim, a 35-month-old boy from Quetta, had not received any routine immunization doses. According to his parents, he received supplementary immunization activity (SIA) doses inconsistently. The child experienced the onset of paralysis on August 22, 2024, despite ongoing vaccination efforts aimed at curbing the wild poliovirus, which continues to circulate, particularly in Balochistan. Of the 33 cases reported across Pakistan this year, 17 have emerged from Balochistan, highlighting the province as the most affected region.

Officials from the Polio Eradication Initiative (PEI) said that environmental samples from Quetta district and Quetta block have consistently tested positive for WPV1 this year, indicating continued circulation of the virus and heightened risk to children. In 2024 alone, 37 positive environmental samples and three cases have been reported from Quetta, while Quetta block has reported 65 positive samples and 11 cases. A widespread refusal to vaccinate by parents, driven by misinformation and mistrust, is a major factor behind the polio resurgence. PEI officials noted that an increasing number of children in Pakistan have never received any vaccine, a dangerous trend that continues to fuel the transmission of the virus. In Quetta, where environmental samples repeatedly test positive for the virus, children are especially vulnerable.

Compounding the issue are the logistical difficulties posed by local protests and insecurity, which have led to disruptions in vaccination campaigns. Health experts warn that the rise of "zero-dose" children, coupled with harmful myths about vaccines causing sterility, threatens not just the fight against polio but also efforts to control other vaccine-preventable diseases like diphtheria, measles, and pertussis. Pakistan's struggle to eliminate polio reflects broader healthcare challenges, particularly in reaching remote and underserved populations. The resurgence of vaccine-preventable diseases like polio underscores the need for intensified efforts to combat vaccine hesitancy and ensure all children are fully immunized. This latest case serves as a reminder of the urgent need for action to tackle misinformation, overcome logistical barriers, and rebuild trust in vaccinations, PEI officials added.

Saif says PTI's protest call unnerved rulers

Bureau Report

PESHAWAR: Adviser to Chief Minister on Information and Public Relations Barrister Mohammad Ali Saif on Monday said the protest call of the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) had unnerved the federal government.

In a statement, he criticized federal ministers Khwaja Asif and Ahsan Iqbal for their tirade against the PTI, saying that it was the right of the PTI to record its peaceful protest. Barrister Saif believed the federal government felt nervous after the PTI's protest.

However, he said the PTI would continue staging protests until the release of the quashing of the "fake" cases. The CM's aide said the federal government wanted a repeat of Lahore's Model Town firing episode in a bid to prolong its rule. However, he maintained that these tactics of the federal government would backfire. Coming down hard on the federal defence minister, Barrister Saif claimed that he had lost his election to a woman candidate and managed to reach the corridors of power on the strength of form 47. He was also critical of federal minister Ahsan Iqbal and said he was trying to stay relevant through his rhetorical statements.

Barrister Saif said that hosting the meeting of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization would serve no purpose unless the federal government was ousted. He said the federal government was using the conference for political mileage.

Oxford faces backlash over Imran's bid for chancellorship: The Times

By Murtaza Ali Shah

LONDON: The chancellorship at Oxford University has been overshadowed by the intricate interplay of Pakistani politics for the first time after Imran Khan submitted his papers and the university most likely did not predict the backlash his candidacy would provoke, The Times reported on Monday.

The contest is so hot that a legal opinion has been sought on whether or not Imran meets the merit and there is considerable concern in Pakistan regarding the election, particularly in light of Khan's imprisonment, with many of his supporters believing that a victory would significantly increase the likelihood of him being released from prison, the paper said. It said that for centuries, the chancellorship at Oxford University has been held by prominent male figures from the British establishment, typically until their death. However, following Lord Patten of Barnes's announcement of his retirement, fierce competition has erupted to become the figurehead of the world's most renowned university.

For the first time, Oxford will conduct its chancellorship election through an online popularity vote, inviting alumni to rank their preferred candidates in order of preference.

The prominent names wanting to become the next Chancellor are: Lord William Hague, Lady Elish Angiolini, Lord Peter Mandelson, Imran Khan, Dr Margaret Casely-Hayford and Dominic Grieve.

Khan, 73, who read philosophy, politics, and economics at Oxford before graduating in 1975, told The Times last month that he applied to run for chancellor to "give back" to the university that shaped his leadership skills.

However, since his interview, The Times said, legal advice regarding his eligibility for the role has been commissioned. "A leading barrister in London was approached by a party unrelated to the University of Oxford to express an opinion about the eligibility of Khan's candidacy," said the paper.

Although the chancellorship might seem largely ceremonial and is not a paid position — except for covering expenses, it has been overshadowed by the intricate interplay of Pakistani politics. "There is considerable concern in Pakistan regarding the election, particularly in light of Khan's imprisonment, with many of his supporters believing that a victory would significantly increase the likelihood of his release from prison," said the paper. Oxford will announce its list of approved candidates for the upcoming election this week, which will see participation from more than 26,000 registered alumni out of over 250,000 eligible voters. Irene Tracey, the vice-chancellor, has confirmed that, due to the high number of candidates, the election will involve multiple rounds of voting, and the new chancellor is expected to be announced by the end of the year.

"Student opinion is sharply divided, with students and alumni split into pro- and anti-Khan camps. While an open letter, signed by hundreds of students, expresses support for the former cricket star, counter-protests oppose his candidacy for the role," said the paper.

The Times said that a letter, signed by about 170 current students and alumni, showed support for Khan's candidacy, focusing on his "lifelong commitment to public service" as well as accomplishments in cricket, philanthropy, and his previous role as chancellor of the University of Bradford. It said that protestors against his candidacy — led by PMLN UK Youth Wing leader Khuram Butt — have delivered several petitions to the university and have allegedly been handing out leaflets promoting their views.

PHC grants transit bail to KP Assembly deputy speaker, others

By Amjad Safi

PESHAWAR: The Peshawar High Court (PHC) on Monday granted transit bail to Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Assembly Deputy Speaker Suriya Bibi and Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) members of the Punjab Assembly Raja Basharat and Sanam Javed till November 3 with directives to appear before the relevant courts.

The bench also granted transit bail to PTI leader from Punjab Aalia Hanza till November 8 and directed her to appear before the relevant forums. A lawyer, Alan Khan Adenzai Advocate, appeared in the court on behalf of the petitioners.

He told the court that cases had been filed against Aalia Hama, Raja Basharat and Sanam Javed in Mianwali, Taxila and Hassanabad, respectively.

The lawyer said that a case was also registered against KP Assembly Deputy Speaker Suriya Bibi in Hassanabad.

He told the bench that the cases were politically motivated, adding that his clients intended to appear before the relevant courts, but feared arrest.

After hearing the arguments, the bench granted transit bail to the petitioners and directed them to appear before the relevant courts.

Man gunned down in Kurram

By our correspondent

PARACHINAR: Unidentified armed men killed a man in the Mankang area in Kurram tribal district, police sources said on Monday.

The sources said that one Zahir Ali was killed when he was working in his fields. The police got hold of the body after reports that the slain person had been allegedly set on fire. The police registered the case and launched an investigation.

It may be mentioned that 15 people were killed in fresh clashes in the restive Kurram district two days ago.

Also, the Peshawar-Parachinar Road was closed to traffic after the recent clashes. This has created a shortage of food items in Kurram. The local authorities took action to restore peace in the area by arresting around 50 people.

Pakhtun Qaumi Jirga

CM says KP to take up demands with Centre

Provincial assembly debates recommendations approved by forum in Jamrud

By Khalid Khesghi

PESHAWAR: Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Chief Minister Ali Amin Gandapur has said that the provincial government would fully implement the points and demands recommended by Pakhtun Qaumi Jirga in Khyber that come within the constitutional domain of the provincial government.

Speaking on the provincial assembly floor on Monday, he said that the Full House Committee of the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Assembly would discuss all the points and recommendations of the jirga one by one and then take it up with the federal government for implementation.

"We will not play politics or resort to point scoring but implement it for the sake of peace, prosperity and stability of our people and province," Gandapur said, who also leads the Full House Committee of the provincial Assembly.

Earlier, KP Assembly Speaker Babar Saleem Swati suspended the day's agenda and allowed the members to debate the 22-point recommendations approved by Pakhtun Qaumi Jirga in Jamrud, Khyber district, the previous day.

The three-day jirga was convened and organized recently by the proscribed Pashtun Tahafuz Movement (PTM). Almost all political parties and representatives of Pashtun tribes and territories attended the event.

The chief minister said the federal government had taken some steps in urgency that led to unrest and loss of human lives before the beginning of the jirga but soon realized its mistake and empowered the KP government to tackle the situation.

"I am indebted to all political parties, including Interior Minister Mohsin Naqvi who attended the jirga at the Chief Minister's House and then the representatives of the same jirga visited and participated in the Pakhtun Qaumi Jirga in Khyber," he said, adding that he would fulfill the commitment about peace in the province.

Opposition leader and Pakistan Muslim League-N leader Dr Ibadullah Khan said that the House Committee would discuss all the points one by one and would recommend all the 'doable' demands of the Pakhtun jirga, saying that if the state and government could talk to the Taliban, why not with those who are against arms and ammunition.

"The first and foremost responsibility of the provincial government is maintaining law and order but unfortunately the provincial government has failed to maintain its writ in some parts of the province," he added.

Maulana Lutf-ur-Rehman of Jamiat Ulema-e-Islam-Fazl said that lawlessness and political instability led to economic crisis and due to undemocratic and unconstitutional steps by certain elements the country was pushed towards economic and political instability.

He said that dozens of political party workers and PTM activists had been arrested under 3MPO by the provincial government, demanding that all the arrested people should be set free forthwith.

Nisar Baz of the Awami National Party said that Actions (In Aid in Civil Power) Regulations, the British-inherited 16MPO and 3MPO should be scrapped as dozens of political party workers, human rights and social activists had been detained under these laws.

"About 350 PTM activists were still behind bars after being held under 3MPO before the Pakhtun Qaumi Jirga," he added.

ANP MPA Arbab Usman Khan said that all legal routes for trade at the Pak-Afghan border must be reopened for trade between the people of two neighboring countries.

"We have to promote trade between the two countries instead of creating hurdles to our legal routes," the ANP MPA added.

Ahmad Karim Kundi of the Pakistan People's Party (PPP) lauded the role of the KP Assembly speaker and the chief minister by handling the worst situation that was created before the PTM jirga and turning it into a pleasant atmosphere.

"We have to show such unity and harmony for other issues as well related to our province and people," the PPP MPA added.

Muhammad Rashad Khan and Jalal Khan of Pakistan Muslim League-N and Adnan Khan of the JUI-F also participated in the debate. They suggested that the provincial government should also take practical steps for ending bloodshed and violence in the Kurram district.

The session was adjourned till Wednesday (October 16) afternoon.

Gandapur vows to lead PTI protest at D-Chowk

Bureau Report

PESHAWAR: Amid division over the Islamabad March in the party, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Chief Minister Ali Amin Gandapur vowed to lead Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) workers towards Islamabad today, Tuesday and stage a sit-in at D-Chowk against the government for not allowing the party leadership to meet the founding chairman Imran Khan in Adiala jail.

"We have made preparations for the Islamabad march and I will personally lead the party workers from Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. We are seriously concerned about the health of our party leader Imran Khan in jail," Ali Amin Gandapur told The News.

After reaching Islamabad, he said they would go to D-Chowk and stage a sit-in against the government. "There is unrest among the party workers and the government has banned meetings with Imran Khan. Neither the party leaders nor lawyers are allowed to meet the PTI founding chairman in jail, leaving no other option for us than to protest in the federal capital," the chief minister argued.

He said that the PTI meeting decided to march towards Islamabad on October 15.

There is division among the PTI central leaders over the Islamabad protest on October 15-16, where the world leaders have arrived for the two-day Shanghai Cooperation Organization's summit.

The government has deployed Pakistan army troops in Islamabad for the summit.

The PPP chief said they couldn't backtrack on the promise of the party's late leader Benazir Bhutto of forming a constitutional court if an imprisoned person was in no mood to pass the amendment.

He recalled that Benazir Bhutto had returned to the country with the resolve to implement the Charter of Democracy (CoD).

He said Ms Bhutto embraced martyrdom while striving to fulfil her mission of implementing the CoD.

"Should we forget our leader's promise due to an imprisoned person? The Pakistan People's Party is not ready for any compromise on this matter," he said.

Bilawal said he wanted to ask the people of Sindh whether they were satisfied with the current justice system.

He said the present system would continue unchanged if the people were satisfied with it.

He said the CoD provided a solution to rectify the fractured justice system of Pakistan based on injustice.

The PPP chairman said each province should get equal representation in the judiciary if the dispensation of justice had to be ensured.

He said the proposal to constitute a special court along with the regular apex judiciary was aimed at improving the justice system.

He viewed that the constitutional issues would be sorted out if an equal number of judges from each province heard such cases.

Bilawal opined that the new constitutional court would guarantee the protection of fundamental rights of the people.

He said the proposed new court would also adjudicate contentious issues between the federation and any province.

Bilawal reiterated his demand that the federal constitutional court should be set up, while the mechanism to appoint the judges should also be adopted as per the CoD.

He said the narrative that the timing for adopting the constitutional amendment was not appropriate was meaningless.

"When will it happen if it doesn't happen now?" Bilawal asked.

He recalled that no one was worried when military dictator General Ziaul Haq was authorised to amend the Constitution and constitute the federal constitutional court.

Bilawal said he knew about the present judicial system more than anyone.

He lamented that the apex judiciary in the past instead of protecting the rights of the people and serving justice allowed the military dictators to amend the constitution. He said the judiciary only served justice to the judges instead of serving the masses facing injustices.

Bilawal informed the audience that the constitutional amendment proposed by the PPP was as per Benazir's promise and provisions of the CoD.

"We will collectively make the demand for dispensing justice, adopting judicial reforms, constitutional amendment, and equal representation (of provinces in the judiciary)," he said.

He hoped that a consensus would emerge as a result of his consultations with the political forces to ensure that the parliament passed the proposed constitutional amendment.

Bilawal told the audience that he was again going to meet JUI-F chief Fazlur Rehman on this issue on Tuesday (today).

"We will collectively improve the justice system through the 26th Amendment," said the PPP chairman.

Meanwhile, in a statement on his X handle, Bilawal said the political parties and civil society had a unanimous consensus on a specific judicial reform adding that no one should be allowed to undermine the legitimate structural requirements for a Federal Constitutional Court.

The PPP chief said the civil society had called for a Charter of Democracy 2.0 (CoD) in August 2023 to complete the unfinished agenda of CoD signed in 2006 to regain the space lost to the impact of Imran Khan, Gen. Pasha and Gen. Faiz's assault on the democratic consensus.

He said the civil society had given several recommendations including the creation of a Federal Constitutional Court.

He said the long list of endorsements even included a sitting PTI senator.

With his post, Bilawal posted the report of civil society — AwazCDS-Pakistan, Pakistan Development Alliance and Asian Democracy Network that had called for a Charter of Democracy 2.0 to complete the unfinished agenda of CoD signed in 2006.

Meanwhile, JUI-F chief Fazlur Rehman said the government should legislate in accordance with the national conditions and needs.

Talking to the reporters here on Monday, he said the government's constitutional draft will undermine judicial freedom and the public interest.

He said negotiations with the coalition government had led to considerable consensus, while the draft crafted by the government had been rejected, as it will end personal freedom.

"It is our responsibility to create a balance among all the institutions. We have almost reached the consensus. It took us nine months to pass the 18th Amendment; we will prioritize the things needing time," Fazl said they had objected to the government's draft adding that judicial freedom and the people's rights would have been rejected by the government's draft. Everything has to be done in the interest of the people and the country, he added.

The JUI-F chief said he will meet the PPP Chairman Bilawal Bhutto Zardari in Karachi on Tuesday (today) and PMLN chief Muhammad Nawaz Sharif in Lahore.

Fazl said he had appealed to the PTI to postpone the protest until the departure of the SCO delegates.

He said there had been protests in the past but no good results came out. Postponing the protest will not create any problem. As long as the guests are on Pakistan's soil, the protest can be postponed, he emphasized.

In a related development, PPP Vice President and parliamentary leader in the Senate Senator Sherry Rehman held consultations with the Muttahida Qaumi Movement-Pakistan on the proposed constitutional amendments with the special focus on establishment of Federal Constitutional Court and Provincial Constitutional Court.

Dr Asim Hussain accompanied Sherry, while the MQM-P delegation comprised Governor Sindh Kamran Tessori, Dr. Farooq Sattar, and Amin ul Haque.

The meeting was held at the Sindh House here.

The meeting is part of a broader consultation process in accordance with Bilawal Bhutto's vision of a dedicated constitutional court to handle constitutional matters efficiently and ensure equal representation for all provinces at the federal level.

This reform is a critical part of the unfinished agenda of 2006 Charter of Democracy. It will ensure that no government can manipulate the judiciary for political gains as envisioned by Shaheed Murtaza Bhutto Bhutto to uphold democratic principles.

During the meeting, both parties reached a consensus on moving forward with constitutional amendments in a transparent and collaborative manner.

The discussions focused on maintaining ongoing communication and fostering cooperation between the two parties.

Both sides exchanged views on their respective priorities, highlighting the importance of continuing a constructive dialogue.

Senator Sherry emphasized the significance of a longstanding relationship between the PPP and MQM, adding, "Our discussions today were fruitful, and we are committed to maintaining this engagement moving forward."

She highlighted that on the instructions of Bilawal Bhutto, the PPP was actively engaging all the stakeholders in the process of constitutional reforms. "Today, we briefed the MQM leadership about the establishment of constitutional courts," she stated.

In a brief talk with the media, MQM leader Dr Farooq Sattar reiterated that politics was the way to engage the relevant stakeholders.

In another related development, the sub-committee was Monday asked to finalise recommendations about the constitutional amendments within next two days and furnish them with the Special Committee slated to meet on Thursday.

The ANP presented its draft for the constitutional amendment and submitted a proposal for renaming Khyber Pakhtunkhwa as "Paktunkhwa".

It also supported the PPP and PMLN's proposal of establishing a Federal Constitutional Court but opposed the provincial constitutional courts, terming it fanciful and absurd idea putting unnecessary fiscal burden on the state kitty.

The PTI has not submitted its draft to the Special Committee so far. However, it has hinted at submitting its proposals or draft after a meeting with the JUI-F chief Fazlur Rehman on Wednesday.

In its proposal, the ANP opposed the fixing of tenure of the chief justice for three years arguing that it was discriminatory and against the constitutional norms.

The ANP suggested that in article 1 (2)(a), after comma words the Khyber occurring before Paktunkhwa shall be omitted.

In article 172(3) the following shall be added, "Parliament shall by law provide for equal representation of the federal and respective provincial governments in the management, administration and regulation of mineral oil and natural gas.

In article 176, ANP suggested that the following shall be added, "Provided that all provinces shall have equal number of judges in the total strength of the Supreme Court."

The ANP also opposed a proposal for fixing 40 years as the age of a judge for appointment to the High Court arguing that it would compromise the quality and integrity of the High Courts.

In the meeting, all the proposed drafts of the PTI were rejected.

Former prime minister Raja Pervez Ashraf said any further delay was unjustified and now all the parties will have to be serious.

The proposed drafts of all political parties have arrived; this amendment is not for a single individual or a specific party," he said.

During the meeting, ANP chief Aimal Wali Khan and Opposition Leader in the National Assembly Omar Ayub Khan exchanged hot words when Aimal accused the PTI of non-serious attitude.

According to the sources, Omar said, "If we are serious then we are sitting here."

Sources said Aimal responded that he was not addressing him but the chairman.

"You should also address the chair," Aimal Wali Khan responded.

Senator Irfan Siddiqui pointed out that all the parties had submitted their drafts but the PTI was the only party that did not submit anything in black and white.

He said if the PTI leaders were serious, then they should have submitted their inputs on the drafts submit there.

Syed Khurshed Shah convened a meeting of Special Committee on Thursday, (October 17).

Indian High Commission media wing told The News on Monday it had no clue about any schedule of media interaction of its EAM. But sources hinted that since Pakistan would raise the issue of Jammu and Kashmir, occupied by India, in its principal statement, Jaishankar might respond through media before his returning home.

Sources hinted that the Indian minister would have at least two meetings on the margins of the summit with Chinese and Russian foreign ministers.

Meanwhile, Federal Minister for Information and Broadcasting Attaullah Tarar Monday termed the protest call of Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) a hollow threat, saying that the area from the airport to the red zone was completely safe.

He said it was a matter of pride to hold such a big event in Pakistan after 27 years, noting that after 11 years, Chinese Prime Minister Li Qiang had come to Pakistan.

He was holding a news conference after Chinese prime minister's arrival in Pakistan. He said PTI's protest call was a trivial issue as the party leaders were fighting among themselves; Hamid Khan and Ali Muhammad Khan did not want any protest, and some others were saying it was aimed at only recording their protest.

withdrawing its six diplomats from Canada, but an Ottawa government source told AFP they had been expelled, not withdrawn.

The 2023 murder of Canadian citizen Hardeep Singh Nijjar crashed the country's diplomatic relations with India after Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said there were "credible allegations" linking Indian intelligence services to the crime. The expulsion of the diplomats — the most senior envoys on both sides — is a major escalation in the row. India "decided to expel" Ottawa's acting High Commissioner Stewart Wheeler, his deputy and four first secretaries, ordering they leave before midnight on Sunday.

Ottawa announced similar measures in return, with Canadian police saying they had "evidence pertaining to agents of the government of India's involvement in serious criminal activity" in Canada. Nijjar — who immigrated to Canada in 1997 and became a citizen in 2015 — had advocated for a separate Sikh state, known as Khalistan, carved out of India.

He had been wanted by Indian authorities for alleged terrorism and conspiracy to commit murder. Four Indian nationals have been arrested in connection with Nijjar's murder, which took place in the parking lot of a Sikh temple in Vancouver in June 2023.

New Delhi had earlier said it had "received a diplomatic communication from Canada suggesting that the Indian High Commissioner and other diplomats are persons of interest" in the ongoing investigation.

Constitution Court.

The source said that the legal mind being quoted has access to the superior court judges.

The legal personality, who was approached by The News, also confirmed this on condition of not being named. He lamented that some apex court judges have been unnecessarily made controversial. Though many in politics, media and legal fraternity see the decision in reserved seats case as weak, the source insisted that the Supreme Court after October 25 would not do any "misadventure".

After the July 12 decision of the Supreme Court in the reserved seats case, the government apprehends that the post-October 25 Supreme Court could audit the Federal Selection to oust the Shehbaz Sharif government paving the way for the PTI regime. Interestingly, some PTI leaders, including Imran Khan, also expect the same from the post-October 25 apex court.

The government's fear flared when eight judges of the SC issued a clarification/order in the reserved seats case on September 14 when the government and its allies were all set to move a constitutional amendment package in the parliament.

The timing of the clarification was questioned by the ruling political parties. The PPP Chairman Bilawal Bhutto recently cautioned

It said their envoy, Sanjay Kumar Verma, a former ambassador to Japan and Sudan, was a respected career diplomat and that the accusations were "hilarious". New Delhi's foreign ministry said it had told Verma to return home. "We have no faith in the current Canadian Government's commitment to ensure their security," it said in a statement. India on Monday called allegations it was connected to the killing "preposterous" and a "strategy of smearing India for political gains".

Last year, the Indian government briefly curbed visas for Canadians and forced Ottawa to withdraw diplomats, and on Monday threatened further action.

"India reserves the right to take further steps in response to the Trudeau Government's support for extremism, violence and separatism against India," the foreign ministry said.

The foreign ministry also summoned Canadian envoy Wheeler, who said that Ottawa had given India the evidence it had demanded.

"Canada has provided credible, irrefutable evidence of ties between agents of the Government of India and the murder of a Canadian citizen on Canadian soil," Wheeler told reporters after leaving the ministry.

"Now, it is time for India to live up to what it said it would do and look into all those allegations. It is in the interest of both our countries and the peoples of our countries to get to the bottom of this. Canada stands ready to cooperate with India."

India then announced his expulsion.—AFP projects in various sectors, including industry, agricultural modernisation, information technology, and science and technology, for mutual benefit and Pakistan's socio-economic development.

Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif assured Pakistan's unwavering commitment to ensuring the safety of Chinese nationals and projects in Pakistan. "Held most productive talks with Chinese Premier Li Qiang," Shehbaz Sharif said on his X social media site.

He said that they expressed satisfaction at the progress of various important CPEC initiatives and agreed to ensure their timely execution. The PM said that they also discussed ways to further enhance cooperation in multiple areas including trade, investment, economy, energy, agriculture, IT, and defence as well as regional peace and security. "Our strategic partnership and full understanding on our core issues is cornerstone of regional stability and prosperity," the PM said.

He pointed out that they presided over the completion of new Gwadar airport and witnessed the exchange of important MoUs that will enhance cooperation in various fields. "Long Live Pak-China friendship," Shehbaz Sharif concluded.

Both leaders agreed to continue high-level exchanges, which include strengthening cooperation in all bilateral areas.

The meeting discussed the relocation of Chinese industries to Pakistan and also exchanged views on strategies to increase Chinese investment in Pakistan.

It was reiterated during the meeting that Pakistan and China will continue close consultation at multilateral forums as well as on issues of regional and global importance.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and Chinese Premier Li Qiang virtually inaugurated the new Gwadar International Airport.

Addressing inaugural ceremony, Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif said completion of Gwadar International Airport was a gift from China. He said it shows China's commitment and dedication to support Pakistan's economic development agenda and to promote backwards areas of country.

He expressed the confidence that completion of this international Gwadar airport would not only transform Gwadar's economy, but also economy of the country.

Expressing gratitude to Chinese leadership, Shehbaz appreciated untiring efforts of Pakistan and Chinese engineers and workers for their efforts in building a world class airport at Gwadar.

He said a signing ceremony and exchange of MoUs between Pakistan and China in various fields, including industry, agriculture and commerce was witnessed by prime ministers of both countries. The PM expressed confidence that the MoUs would shape into agreements very soon through joint efforts of both countries.

Chinese Premier Li Qiang said his country would continue working with Pakistan to uphold the principle of planning, building, and benefiting together.

He said the New Gwadar International Airport is a critical step in building Gwadar into a regional hub of connectivity. He further said that Chinese and Pakistani workers built this modern and high-standard airport in five years, demonstrating the strength of China-Pakistan cooperation.

The Chinese premier expressed confidence that the inauguration of the New Gwadar International Airport would significantly enhance connectivity in the Gwadar region.

The Chinese prime minister assured that Beijing would continue to work closely with the intimate Pakistani friends in building and benefiting together by pursuing the goals of high standards, sustainability and high quality of Belt and Road Initiative.

Referring to the Pak-China ties, Li Qiang termed those "special relationship and friendship", saying that this all-weather strategic partnership was further deepening. "The unique and unbreakable time-tested ironclad friendship stood the global changing landscape," he added.

Meanwhile, the military leadership of Pakistan met visiting Chinese Prime Minister Li Qiang here on Monday.

The Chinese premier held an important meeting with Chairman Joint Chiefs of Staff Committee and three services chiefs. The meeting expressed the resolve to further strengthen and widen relations between the two countries. Matters relating to menace of terrorism and defence also came under discussion.

The Chinese PM lauded role of Pakistan's armed forces against terrorism and his country's full support and assistance in this war.

Earlier on Monday, Pakistan and China signed 13 memorandums of understanding (MoUs) for enhancing cooperation including renewal of the currency swaps agreement between the two countries and signing of the protocol on quarantine requirements for export of domestic meat to China.

Both the countries did not sign any MoU related to the re-profiling of Chinese IPP debt of $15.4 billion during the official visit of the Chinese premier to Pakistan.

However, Minister for Finance Mohammad Aurangzeb when asked by The News said the profiling of Chinese IPPs debt was work in progress.

Minister for Planning Ahsan Iqbal said Pakistan and China have agreed to move towards construction of Mainline-1 (ML-1) under which China would grant financing for construction of phase-1 from Karachi to Hyderabad. The financing agreement for ML-1, he said, would be done as both sides agreed to devise modalities in months ahead.

Pakistan and China signed MoU for strengthening security cooperation as China International Development Cooperation Agency (CIDCA) and Ministry of Economic Affairs reached by the leaders of two countries would maintain a security environment for development. Both parties would maintain a peaceful and secure environment for development which is an important guarantee for deepening development cooperation and both sides agreed to further strengthen counter terrorism and security cooperation. The CIDCA is willing to provide six bulletproof vehicles to support national security and economic and social development of Pakistan.

Both sides will maintain communication on related specific matters, discuss and solve relevant issues through consultation in a timely manner.

Pakistan and China signed cooperation for Television co-production. The agreement between Pakistan and China aims to promote cultural exchanges by encouraging co-productions in television. The collaboration allows the production of television content that will be beneficial in fostering cultural understanding and cooperation, particularly by meeting technical and creative requirements set by both nations. The media should note the role this agreement plays in bringing both nations' cultural narratives to wider audiences, enhancing bilateral ties. For fire and rescue vehicles project, a letter of exchange highlighted China's commitment to aid Pakistan with 19 fire trucks, a multi-functional rescue vehicle, and a rescue excavator. It would significantly boost Pakistan's emergency response capabilities, specifically for fire and rescue services in Islamabad.

Information and Communication Cooperation: The MoU focuses on enhancing digital infrastructure, promoting projects such as cloud services, smart classrooms, and green energy solutions for higher education. This is pivotal for Pakistan's digital transformation and competitive standing in the global market.

Strengthening Livelihood Cooperation: This MoU strengthens social and livelihood projects under the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC), focusing on agriculture, healthcare, and vocational training. It supports Pakistan's socio-economic development and aligns with broader regional goals under the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI).

Development of Joint Laboratories: This MoU facilitates the creation of joint laboratories focused on disaster prevention and hydropower technology. The joint research and technology transfer will enhance Pakistan's capabilities in disaster management and rural electrification.

Water Conservancy and Disaster Mitigation: This MoU aims at addressing Pakistan's needs in flood control and post-disaster reconstruction. It includes initiatives like river training and flood prevention, which are crucial for mitigating disaster impacts in vulnerable regions.

Minutes of 13th Joint Cooperation Committee meeting of CPEC and 7th Joint Working Group on Gwadar under CPEC were also handed over.

Earlier in the day, the Chinese premier landed in Islamabad on four-day official visit ahead of the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) summit.

APP adds: Premier Li earlier arrived at PM House, and Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif warmly received him at the formal welcome ceremony, where he was given a guard of honour before proceedings for the meeting and delegation-level talks.

All set for SCO summit today of prime ministers and high-ranking officials from the SCO member states, including Russia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan, and the First Vice President of Iran. The External Affairs Minister of India and Premier of the State Council of China, Li Qiang, will also represent their respective countries.

The prime minister of Mongolia as observer state, and deputy chairman of the cabinet of ministers and foreign minister of Turkmenistan as special guest will also participate in the meeting.

The SCO Council of Heads of Government meeting would discuss ongoing cooperation in fields of economy, trade, environment and socio-cultural linkages and review the performance of the organisation.

PM Shehbaz Sharif would take over the chair of SCO Council of Chief Executives/Heads of the Government on Tuesday (today) for the period of one year, as India is relinquishing it after 17 months.

He would also hold important bilateral meetings with the visiting heads of delegations on the sidelines of the meeting.

Indian Minister for External

Affairs (MEA) Subrahmanyam Jaishankar would represent Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi at the summit. His would stay in Islamabad for about 24 hours, and he would return to his capital on Wednesday evening.

Jaishankar's visit would be the first by an Indian external affairs minister in almost 10 years. He might attend the welcome dinner, hosted by PM Shehbaz Sharif at the PM House for the delegates on Tuesday.

Both the countries have excluded the prospect of a formal bilateral meeting on the occasion, but visiting Indian minister, like other delegates, would converse with host PM Shehbaz Sharif and Deputy PM Senator Ishaq Dar, who is also his counterpart, prior to the main summit. Jaishankar already stated that he was not traveling to Islamabad to address bilateral relations but to fulfil his role as a "good member" of the SCO, which comprises Pakistan, China, Russia, Iran, India, and four Central Asian nations.

The last Indian EAM to visit Pakistan was Sushma Swaraj in December 2015.

The Indian PM has never participated in the annual meeting of the Council of Heads of Government since India became a member in 2017, so Jaishankar's attendance comes as no founder Imran Khan in Adiala Jail early Tuesday.

It was conveyed to the PTI, which faced internal division on the option of protest, by the government that medical check-up of the incarcerated party leader will take place Tuesday. PTI political committee considered it and decided to delay the protest for the time being.

PTI Barrister Gohar confirmed the postponement of the protest and said that Interior Minister Mohsin Naqvi made an official contact on behalf of the government and assured that the doctors will be sent to Adiala Jail Tuesday morning.

He said he did not understand the purpose of the protest. He said the army, rangers and troops were deployed and fool-proof security measures were taken.

The minister said Pakistan's economy was moving in a positive direction, noting Bloomberg called Pakistan an emerging economy; investment is increasing due to reduction of policy rates, inflation rate has decreased to 6.9pc, IT exports are increasing rapidly, he added. He continued that Pakistan's emerging economy was being viewed positively across the world.

To a question about PTI's style of politics, Tarar said the more you increase hatred and ego, the more it will increase. "On the one side, there is ego while on the other is patriotism; and historically, there has always been a difference between what is right and what is wrong," he remarked.

The minister contended that those who could carry out May-9 attacks, desecrate the martyrs' memorials by destroying them; those who could write to the IMF to bankrupt the country; those who think that any leader was bigger than Pakistan, "let me make it clear that no political party, including his and no political leader, is bigger than Pakistan".

"The day I understand that my political party and my political leadership are bigger than Pakistan, then I have no right to live in Pakistan," he added.

Tarar said if Pakistanis exists, then there are political parties and politicians. "If someone says that it is not Pakistan, then it can only be regretted," he argued.

Referring to the SCO moot, the minister said that "it is a matter of pride for us to have an event of this level in Pakistan after 27 years; the image of Pakistan has been restored at the international level and when a country hosts such a big conference, it also speaks volumes about its capabilities. It's good that we have the ability to hold major events".

He said that the successful holding of the SCO meeting gives hope that "we have the ability to organise the World Cup or a major international sports competition tomorrow. The image of Pakistan will be improved at the global level by holding the event".

Separately, the federal government launched the Media Facilitation Centre on Monday, equipped with most modern facilities, to assist international and local media during the SCO Summit 2024, being hosted by Pakistan for the first time on October 15-16.

The facilitation centre was launched here at Pak-China Friendship Centre by the information ministry, along with senior officers of the ministry. The centre has been decorated with thematic pictorials, banners and decorative material, fountains, highlighting the national landmarks of the member states, participating in the two-day regional summit.

The media centre has SMDs, projecting banners of different SCO members, whereas a dedicated multimedia showcasing eye catching landscapes and cultural heritage of Pakistan has been installed.

The ministry has set up a display centre providing literature regarding notable literary figures, cultural heritage, archaeological sites, tourism potential and other information valuable for the visiting dignitaries and the international media.

A high-speed wifi internet, studio, printing facilities have also been provided at the centre.

Member National Assembly Barrister Daniyal Chaudhary visited different stalls and cafeteria of the facilitation centre and appreciated the minister and his team.

Separately, Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) leader Sherry Rehman Monday expressed her enthusiasm about the SCO summit, considering it a significant honour for Pakistan and believed that the pivotal event would not only bolster regional ties but also stabilise the country's foreign policy as international trust in Pakistan grows.

In an exclusive talk with a private news channel, she emphasised the significance of the SCO Summit in restoring confidence and strengthening diplomatic ties for Pakistan, which were damaged in the previous regime.

"The SCO Summit presents a crucial opportunity for Pakistan to deepen its economic ties with member states, particularly China and Russia and position itself as a hub for trade and transit, facilitating greater economic integration within the region," she added.

"By actively participating in the SCO, Pakistan can enhance its geopolitical and economic standing, strengthen security cooperation and promote regional connectivity," she added.

"India's participation in the SCO Summit alongside Pakistan is a significant development where India can get an opportunity to discuss issues on table talks," she added.

Sherry also emphasised that the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) should demonstrate maturity and understand the significance of the SCO summit.

"The SCO summit, founded by China and Russia in 2001, focuses on key areas such as political, economic, international security, and defence matters," she added.

Strategic importance of connectivity emphasised for regional prosperity

Jamila Achakzai

ISLAMABAD: Multilateral collaboration through regional organisations provides a vital and stable framework for enhancing regional cooperation and connectivity. The organisations, such as the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO), provide the foundation for effective partnerships, playing a crucial role in fostering peace, security, and stable economic growth.

Coinciding with the 23rd Council of Heads of Government meeting of the SCO in Islamabad, the Institute of Policy Studies (IPS) has published 'Bridging Horizons: Unravelling the enigma of connectivity between Pakistan and Central Asia'.

Authored by Dr. Faisal Javaid, Dr. Uzma Siraj, and Polish scholar Prof. Dr. Arkadiusz Zukowski, the study offers a comprehensive analysis of the historical, geopolitical, and economic dimensions that connect Pakistan and other SCO member states, particularly the Central Asian nations.

As Pakistan and other regional countries deepen their relationships, the book emphasises the strategic importance of connectivity in achieving regional prosperity, echoing the legacy of the ancient Silk Road and modern infrastructure projects like the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI).

Since joining the SCO in 2017, Pakistan has actively contributed to regional initiatives promoting security, stability, and economic development. Bridging Horizons explores how the SCO's mission provides a crucial platform for collaboration, essential for fostering regional connectivity and economic growth.

Through its various initiatives, the organization aims to enhance infrastructure, energy cooperation, and financial integration across member states. The study also highlights the alignment of SCO goals with key projects such as the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC), which positions Pakistan as a vital transit hub linking Central Asia to South Asia and the Middle East.

While the book highlights numerous opportunities for economic collaboration, including energy projects like the TAPI gas pipeline and CASA-1000, it also addresses critical challenges. Infrastructure deficits, vast distances, difficult terrain, and geopolitical tensions often hinder regional cooperation. The authors argue that the SCO should adopt an integrated approach to overcoming these barriers by engaging external partners, international organizations, and the private sector to boost expertise and resources.

The truth is, neither Pakistan nor India has anything to gain from hostilities. Even if, hypothetically, either side harboured ambitions of domination, the reality of today's world, particularly in light of our nuclear capabilities, renders such notions futile. A conflict between our nations

An open letter to Dr S Jaishankar

By Syed Nayyar Uddin Ahmad

Your Excellency Dr. S. Jaishankar, honourable minister of external affairs, Government of India, it is with great respect and anticipation that we, on behalf of the people of Pakistan, welcome you on your maiden visit to our country in connection with the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) Summit in Islamabad.

This visit holds profound significance, not only in the context of the multilateral framework of the SCO but also in the historical narrative of our bilateral relationship. At this pivotal moment, we must seize the opportunity to reflect on our shared history, our present challenges, and, most importantly, the immense potential of a peaceful and prosperous future for both India and Pakistan.

As we welcome you, we extend our warm wishes to all the people of India for a happy, peaceful, and prosperous future. We, the people of Pakistan, would like to communicate to our Indian brothers and sisters that if we are to genuinely pursue friendship, that friendship must be true, devoid of pretension or hypocrisy. Authentic relations can only be built on the foundation of mutual respect, understanding, and a sincere commitment to peace. It is in this spirit that we urge both our nations to move beyond the distrust that has defined much of our shared history and to embark on a new journey of cooperation.

The truth is, neither Pakistan nor India has anything to gain from hostilities. Even if, hypothetically, either side harboured ambitions of domination, the reality of today's world, particularly in light of our nuclear capabilities, renders such notions futile. A conflict between our nations would bring nothing but devastation for both, and indeed, for the broader region. The idea that one can emerge victorious without severe consequences is an illusion. We are intertwined not only by geography but by the shared futures of over a billion people. It is time to recognize that war, in any form, is not an option for either of us.

So why continue to waste precious time, energy, and resources in sustaining policies of enmity that only perpetuate this futile cycle of hatred? Why should we remain prisoners of the past, clinging to historical grievances that offer no solution for the future?

It is time to bury the bitterness of the past and embrace a new era of genuine friendship, akin to the remarkable transformation witnessed in Europe. There, nations that were once bitter enemies - countries that fought two devastating world wars - now live in peace and harmony. Their borders are open, their economies integrated, and their collective energies focused on development and progress rather than conflict. Europe's story is one of reconciliation and renewal, and it serves as an inspiring example for South Asia.

We echo the timeless sentiment: Ring out the old, ring in the new, Ring, happy bells, across the snow:

The year is going, let him go; Ring out the false, ring in the true. Let us, too, have genuine peace - not the mere absence of war, but the presence of trust, cooperation, and mutual benefit. Let us take the bold step of removing military forces from our borders, not out of weakness or naiveté, but out of the confidence that peace is the only path forward. By doing so, we would signal to the world, and to each other, that we are serious about our commitment to a peaceful subcontinent.

Together, let us wage a war, not against each other, but against the true enemies of our people: poverty, hunger, disease, and illiteracy. Let us transform our region into a bastion of peace and a haven of prosperity, where future generations can live without the shadow of conflict hanging over them.

Ring out false pride in place and blood,

The civic slander and the spite; Ring in the love of truth and right, Ring in the common love of good, Ring out old shapes of foul disease,

Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;

Ring out the thousand wars of old,

Ring in the thousand years of peace.

India and Pakistan, with their rich histories and immense human potential, only need a decade of genuine peace to emerge as global economic and cultural powerhouses. The talent, creativity, and resilience of our peoples, once unburdened by conflict, will propel both nations to unprecedented heights. But this transformation hinges on one critical condition: authentic peace. A peace that mirrors the unity of Europe, a region once riddled with conflict but now thriving as a model of cooperation and collective progress.

Why should India and Pakistan continue on a path that keeps us divided, much like the Koreans? Why not strive instead to emulate the unity of Europe, where former adversaries now work hand-in-hand for the common good? Europe's success was born out of pragmatism, not sentimentality. It was the realization that cooperation, not conflict, was the key to a brighter future.

Today, both India and Pakistan possess nuclear arsenals, and the concept of one nation "conquering" the other has been rendered obsolete. A full-scale war between us, especially a nuclear one, would result in mutual destruction, leaving no winners, only desolation. The very idea of a "victory" through war is a dangerous delusion. History has shown us, through figures like Hitler and Mussolini, that such ambitions only lead to catastrophe.

Thus, peace is not just a choice for India and Pakistan - it is the only option. Challenges between our nations will always exist, but we must prioritize peace above all else. It is time to transcend our differences, not by ignoring them, but by managing them in a way that fosters understanding rather than conflict.

One key issue that continues to strain our relationship is Kashmir, the unfinished agenda of the partition. While this issue remains deeply emotional and complex, it must be resolved fairly, with the aspirations of the Kashmiri people at the forefront. The UN resolutions provide a framework, but the best way forward may be to give the people of Kashmir, on both sides of the Line of Control, a ten-year cooling-off period. During this time, unhindered trade and hassle-free travel should be allowed, enabling Kashmiris to build bridges of understanding.

Excellency, let us turn a new page in our history with a simple yet profound slogan: Long live the friendship of the teeming millions of India and Pakistan. Together, we can build a future where both our nations thrive, and our people prosper in peace and harmony.

Best wishes for your visit.

CPI rescues 11 girl students from college hostel after abuse complaints

Myra Imran

ISLAMABAD: Responding to reports of abuse and harassment against the CEO and commandant of a private cadet college in Humnuk, the Child Protection Institute (CPI), in collaboration with the Islamabad Capital Territory (ICT) administration, conducted a raid and recovered 11 female students from the college hostel.

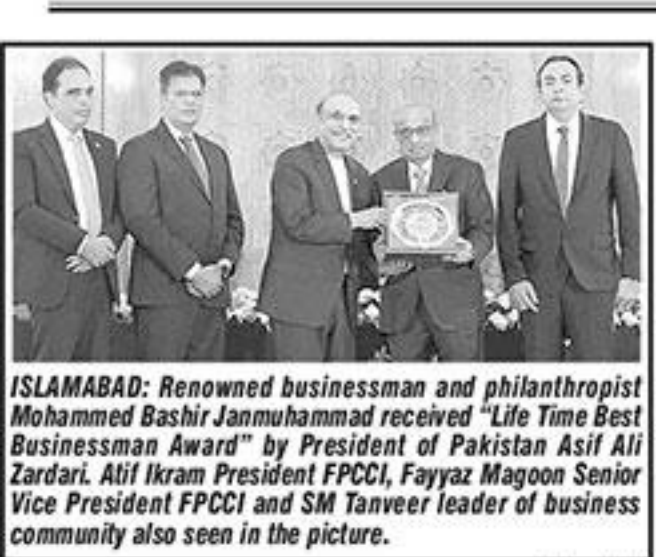

The raid was led by CPI Director General Rabeeah Hadi alongside Assistant Deputy Commissioner Mehreen Baloch. During the operation, the team inspected the hostel facilities and found the environment 'unsuitable' for healthy living. Besides that, there is no separation between the boys' and girls' hostels. The team, which also included Area Magistrate Kamran Saghir and CPI Child Protection officers, met with the hostel's female warden and a young teacher who was only a graduate. "We are currently evaluating the hostel's standards and the rules under which the college is registered. Meanwhile, the girls have been removed from the premises. Medical examinations have been conducted and the reports confirm signs of bruising on the students, even a month after the reported incident," stated DG CPI Rabeeah Hadi. She said that the girls registered complaint with CPI through helpline 1121.

According to the statements of girl students, the issue started with a requested of an outing similar to those regularly arranged for male students. The girl students described the hostel conditions as cramped, lacking any space for recreational activities. The outing was scheduled for September 15 but was cancelled at the last moment, causing frustration among the girls. The girls gathered in a room and started discussing the disappointing attitude of the administration. The junior teachers reported the incident to the male administration, seeking disciplinary measures. Fearing punishment by the male staff, the girls locked the room from inside and insisted on the presence of female warden before engaging with the male staff. Instead, the male staff forcibly broke down the door.

Following this, commandant allegedly assaulted the girls with a stick and forced them to perform approximately 300 repetitions of a sit-stand while continuing the physical punishment. The college's CEO, reportedly also punished the girls, using a pipe. The students were then confined to the hostel for 23 days, forbidden from contacting their parents.

ISLAMABAD: The change in weather conditions along with variation in temperature between day and night in this region of the country may put people living with immunodeficiency at greater risk of contracting infections particularly the respiratory tract infections including colds, flu, throat infections, pneumonia and acute bronchitis.

Almost all public sector healthcare facilities in the Pakistan is not only one of the most vulnerable countries to climate change but also amongst the only three that are continuously impacted. It remains perilously caught in the eye of the climate storm.

While being a minimal (less than one per cent) contributor to this global issue, it is unjustly bearing the carbon excesses of the global climate polluters as it distressingly faces up to ravaging floods, unlivable heatwaves, uncontrollable forest fires and expanding droughts.

Climate change also continues to exacerbate the country's spiraling economic meltdown, primarily triggered by the high and continuously rising energy costs of scandalously negotiated power projects, mostly running on imported fuel. The escalating fuel bills are ripping apart the national fabric and playing havoc with the lives of ordinary citizens already overburdened beyond their means.

At the heart of this unforgiving situation, lies the country's 'coal dilemma' which is compelling it to make some stark choices on its energy front.

On the one side, Pakistan has just started to reap the benefits of its large coal reserves in the Thar desert. At 180 Bton they are the world's seventh largest coal reserves and are estimated to be enough to potentially fuel 100,000MW of energy for 200 years. This purely indigenous source remains mostly untapped and promises to be a cheap energy source that can also offset the burgeoning fuel import bill. Moreover, it embeds the benefits of providing a reliable base load necessary for the stability of the energy generation system in the country.

Between coal and clean energy

At the global level, despite the large chest-thumping announcements of phasing down coal, it still predominantly fuels the global economy. The ongoing Ukraine war ironically prompted a return to coal in a number of countries that had previously vowed to stop using this fuel. These global trends clearly evidence that immediate national economic interests, as always, continue to override longer-term global climate change benefits.

On the flip side, there is no doubt that climate change is proving to be the real weapon of mass destruction, unleashing its impacts with rising ferocity and increasing frequency across the globe and coal remains the villainous dirty fuel exacerbating the issue. All countries now understand, and accept this, and have been struggling to initially phase down and then eventually, phase out this fuel.

What is becoming clear is that expanding coal-based power generation will increasingly come with associated costs in the future. These may range from lending banks refusing to finance this expansion to setting up tariff and non-tariff trade barriers such as the recent EU-based Carbon Border Adjustment Tax, to global carbon pricing mechanisms that will aim to curtail this coal expansion.

Pakistan has always endeavoured to be a part of the solution to climate change, and not add to the problem. While facing its dilemma on coal, it is also fortunate to have the luxury of possessing cleaner fuel options available in the country, including abundant solar, wind channels and a huge untapped hydel energy potential along the Indus cascade urgent low-cost energy needs using the cheap local indigenous coal or put this on a low priority owing to global climate concerns. There is no easy way out of this predicament.

Within this contradictory context, Pakistan announced its 'INDC' (Nationally Determined Contribution) at COP26 in 2021 which gave a clear roadmap for its future development pathway.

with these shifts in place, Pakistan could offset all of its carbon emissions of around 500 MT and even go 'carbon negative'.

Alongside this vision was the big and bold announcement of halting all future expansion of coal power, based on imported coal, and to only employ the best available technologies including underground coal gasification, for local coal utilization.

A local research institute (PRIED) has just done a very useful comparison of the future coal expansion options for Pakistan and deduced that the incremental costs, of shifting to the cleaner coal gasification technology from the existing coal burning, is more than three times (Rs11/kWh to Rs36/kWh) while this shift could avoid and reduce carbon emissions by more than 70 per cent.

An even bigger green jump can be made by deploying carbon capture and storage which drops the carbon emissions to 'net zero' but escalates the incremental cost almost 18 times (Rs178/kWh). The message is very clear. Pakistan's clean energy transition out of coal comes with an incremental cost. This transition becomes equitable and just – only if this extra cost is matched with additional and concessional climate financing.

The good news is that innovative financing mechanisms for such a transition are now fast evolving, and becoming available, for countries willing to think and act out of the box. The Asian Development Bank announced the ETM (Energy Transition Mechanism) in 2021 intending to shift country projects out of coal towards renewable and ensure revenue neutrality for the investors through concessional financing.

Pakistan came forward and became one of the initial five countries chosen to pilot this innovative climate financing instrument. However, since then, we have failed to fully capitalise on this opportunity towards a green shift while others, including Indonesia, have worked towards early retirement of their carbon-emitting projects.

Similarly, the JETM (Joint Energy Transition Mechanism) is an instrument where many countries jointly pool to financially facilitate a clean energy transition. South Africa ventured to lead this by announcing its transition out of coal while managing to raise $8.5 billion through JETM for that shift. The coming COP29 will provide a forum to share many such opportunities.

Pakistan has laid out a green vision and a well-searched pathway to make a just and equitable energy transition, which would include early retirement of polluting plants, a shift towards renewables and the deployment of lowest-emission coal technologies.

Financing is available and the instruments are in the market. What is lacking is a commitment to action backed by accessible finance, which can translate this vision into a reality. A green energy transition will be good for the fight against climate change, good for Pakistan, and good for the world.

Gender, justice, and Pakistan

Part - I

Zainab Durrani

Pakistan is a country known for many virtues and far more than many vices. Our rankings in global indices remarking on the state of our human rights read as a consistently downwards sloping graph over the years, ranging from terrible to truly inexcusable.

To boot, we stand loud and proud at number 145 out of a grand total of 146 countries that were reviewed in terms of gender parity, as per the World Economic Forum's recent report. Even as per the government's own admission, SDG 5 which relates to gender equality has remained stagnant in terms of progress since 2017.

This spiraling trend is keeping in line with the average daily headlines we read as a nation, coupled with the Pakistan Health and Demographic Survey 2017-18 finding that states that a staggering 28 per cent of Pakistani women aged 15-49 have faced some form of gender-based violence in their lives.

This in itself should be eye-opening, given that underreporting is a key concern in this demographic, as the act of speaking up on its own is laced with shame, to say nothing of what follows the minute a GBV (gender-based violence) survivor chooses to voice their pain.

Factors such as this imposition of societal stigma, internal psychological barriers, fear of retaliation, and a dearth of faith in the judicial system widen the gap between harm and justice. Given this, the actual numbers, even at a modest estimate, are scary to just ponder over.

By and large, the conditioning around gender roles seeps in from an early age and serves to keep existing power structures in place by assigning biases and hierarchies. This flows seamlessly into career choices, workplaces and limited growth opportunities where women are concerned. This is evident from the low percentage of women in the Pakistani workforce, which as of 2021 stands at 20 per cent whilst the population's gender distribution stands at 49 per cent.

Our women are largely absent from both ends of the spectrum, as those approaching the justice system and those responsible for upholding it

In a country where interaction with the police bears greater resemblance to a threat rather than providing any semblance of safety, it is more than understandable why we see the low numbers that are reported when just anecdotal evidence would suggest we have a GBV epidemic on our hands.

These elements, coupled with the dismal rates of women's representation in the law and order sector of the country act as a compounded cause for our regression as a society. It is not a mere coincidence that our women are largely absent from both ends of the spectrum, as those approaching the justice system and those responsible for upholding it.

One of the key and obvious ways to combat this, and promote public confidence in the system, is the inclusion of women in these spaces that have been created to dispense justice.

Just as with any public policymaking endeavour, if those who are affected by the policy in question are not consulted or involved in its making and shaping, it will all but certainly make for an impotent strategy, at best.

A participatory approach is key to providing impactful remedies and if women are not a significant part of the workforce involved in dispensing order and justice, we will continue to repeat mistakes that have brought us to the penultimate ranking status we currently enjoy. Not only that, the avenues of access to justice can repeatedly be remade and tweaked, widened and highlighted but till we can assure our girls and women of a genuine shift in prevailing attitudes that we all have grown up witnessing, no actual change can be expected to come of it.

For us to move forward hand-in-hand with all of our people on equal footing, and for us to progress past antiquated gender roles, we need a multilateral approach to fill in the lacunae glaring at us. One that targets the core issue from all angles. Not only do we need laws implemented equitably but for those implementing them to be representative of and sympathetic to our population's reality.

This, in practical terms, could look like progressive recruitment drives in key sectors to offset real-time barriers to entry. Gender sensitivity programmes inspire empathy and neutralise the knee-jerk reaction of victim blaming. We need to actively commit to wanting better for our women, as well as for society at large.

The Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) Summit is a vital platform for addressing key regional issues such as trade, investment, security, and economic cooperation among member states.

For Pakistan, the summit represents a significant opportunity to enhance its geopolitical relevance, stimulate economic growth, and take steps toward sustainable development. It also offers Pakistan a chance to present its vision for regional prosperity, focusing not only on growth but also on the well-being of its population and neighboring countries.

The SCO comprises a diverse group of nations, including China, Russia, India, and the Central Asian states. The inclusion of Pakistan and India as full members has further amplified the geopolitical importance of the organisation.

For Pakistan, regional peace is of paramount importance, particularly in light of challenges posed by instability in Afghanistan, cross-border terrorism, and evolving threats such as cyber warfare. The summit provides an opportunity for Pakistan to engage in meaningful dialogues with its regional partners on security cooperation and intelligence-sharing. These discussions can help strengthen Pakistan's security posture while contributing to regional stability. Emerging threats, such as cybersecurity, the rise of extremism, and climate-related risks, should also be central to the security agenda during this summit.

The organisation provides Pakistan access to a vast market with substantial trade potential. The summit serves as a platform to strengthen economic cooperation with key partners like China and Russia, while also leveraging the benefits of initiatives such as the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC). Pakistan's trade ties with SCO member states have been steadily growing, but the potential remains largely untapped, particularly in the services sector.

Pakistan should focus on promoting trade in services, where it has significant potential. The country's burgeoning IT sector, for instance, has seen rapid growth in recent years, with IT exports crossing $3 billion annually. This sector holds immense potential for expansion, and Pakistan can propose agreements that facilitate IT services, banking, and financial consulting across SCO countries.

To enhance its position, Pakistan should actively showcase its talent in information technology, finance, education, and tourism as valuable service exports that can contribute to the region's economic diversification.

Pakistan's services sector is a crucial pillar of its economy, contributing nearly 60 per cent to its GDP. However, much of the sector's potential remains untapped in international trade, particularly within the SCO framework. At the summit, Pakistan can propose an agenda focused on enhancing trade in services, specifically in areas where it has competitive advantages such as IT, education, and healthcare.

By presenting specific initiatives to streamline the export of services to SCO nations, Pakistan can push for regional agreements on easier cross-border digital trade, skill exchange programs, and improved regulatory alignment. These measures would help integrate Pakistan's services sector more deeply into regional markets and attract foreign direct investment (FDI) into its high-potential industries. CPEC continues to be a key driver of economic growth and infrastructure development in Pakistan. However, its significance goes beyond merely en-economic model that promotes regional prosperity rather than merely focusing on regional growth. Unlike traditional growth models that emphasise GDP expansion, a prosperity-based approach would highlight human development, inclusivity, and equitable resource distribution. Pakistan can push for policies that ensure economic benefits reach all segments of society, advocating for investments in education, digital infrastructure, and sustainable development across SCO member states. This model would not only help uplift vulnerable communities but also foster long-term regional stability.

Pakistan has a growing IT sector and digital economy that could play a transformative role in the region. At the summit, the country should advocate for the creation of an inclusive digital economy within SCO countries. By promoting policies that facilitate digital infrastructure, online education, and digital banking services, Pakistan can help create a more connected and inclusive region. This approach would benefit rural and underdeveloped areas, fostering innovation and entrepreneurship while reducing economic inequality.

Lastly, Pakistan could champion the development of sustainable regional value chains, focusing on agriculture, renewable energy, and manufacturing. By working together, SCO countries can build a regional economy that supports each other's industries, reduces external dependencies, and promotes mutual growth.

Pakistan's fertile lands, untapped natural resources, and large domestic market of over 250 million people make it an attractive destination for investment in agriculture and corporate farming. With an increasingly educated labour force, Pakistan can offer SCO countries a skilled workforce, making it a valuable partner in regional development.

As Pakistan continues its participation in the SCO, the role of its leadership will be crucial. Building on past initiatives, the leadership must work toward aligning Pakistan's economic and strategic interests with the changing dynamics of the region.

A proactive approach is needed to attract foreign investment, create jobs, and ensure that Pakistan remains an integral part of the region's future prosperity. By pushing for comprehensive economic reforms, green technology integration, and regional collaboration, Pakistan can position itself as a leader in the SCO and play a pivotal role in shaping the region's economic future.

One year on...

Ramzy Baroud

The last year of a relentless Israeli war on Gaza, and bloody raids and violence in the West Bank, have been largely viewed in terms of their horrific humanitarian outcomes: the unequalled killing of tens of thousands, the obliteration of Gaza, and the destruction in the West Bank.

While humanitarian urgency must indeed be a priority, other factors are also deserving of consideration, especially as we mark the one-year anniversary of the ongoing war.

Even though the mass killing is yet to end, there are several conclusions that can already be drawn about the long-term consequences of the war. One, Palestinians, despite the military occupation, the siege, and the numerous failures of their leadership, remain political actors, with powerful agency.

This agency does not stem from any superficial achievements of their autocratic leadership or the still symbolic recognition of the state of Palestine, but the collective resilience and power of ordinary Palestinians in Gaza and throughout Occupied Palestine.

The war in Gaza would have looked different if Palestinian society broke down in the face of the war machine, fragmented into fighting factions or grew desperate in the face of impossible pressures – war, unprecedented destruction, acute famine, etc.

This fact alone reassures us that the Palestinian people's destiny will not be that of erasure or even marginalization, but of continuity and even future prosperity.

Two, that Arab societies, however consumed with their own struggles and social and political challenges, remain united in perceiving the Palestinian cause as a top Arab priority. This has allowed many Arab governments to reiterate their position regarding the centrality of the Palestinian cause.

Though current circumstances may, for now, prevent some Arab societies from being direct participants in turning their devotion to Palestine into tangible and practical support, the future shall prove that the renewed centrality of Palestine in Arab political and popular discourses will have its own weight and value.

The same logic applies to the Muslim Ummah, which has never been so united around a cause in decades as it is now united around Palestine. This can be felt in all Muslim countries, and among Muslim communities around the world, especially in the West.

The future shall reveal more regarding the meaning of the return of Palestine to the embrace of Arabs and Muslims. However, one can already conclude that the resilience of the Palestinian people has, once more, refocused the attention on Palestine as the leading cause of all Arabs and Muslims.

While some Arab states are desperately trying to find a safe distance, and to play no part in the Gaza-centered regional conflict, non-state actors in Yemen, Lebanon, Iraq, and elsewhere are challenging the traditional rules of Middle East politics.

Arab masses are no longer beseeching Arab armies to save the Palestinians as has been the case in previous wars, conflicts, and massacres.

The roles being played by Ansarallah in Yemen and Hezbollah in Lebanon seem to have filled the roles that should have, in theory, been played by traditional armies.

This is no longer expected, or frankly, even required. Official Arab armies have historically proven ineffective and corrupt. Now, they are mere spectators as powerful armed groups have moved in to fill in the gaps, showing solidarity with Palestinians in word and deed.

Historically, this is unprecedented. This change shall further undercut whatever legitimacy was still possessed by Arab governments, especially those with immediate proximity to Palestine.

Three, though international law remains as ineffective as ever, the bloody war in Palestine is creating rifts between the Global South and the Global North. The latter, with a few exceptions, remains adamant in repeating old mantras about Israel's "right to defend itself," while disregarding all Palestinian rights.

However, many countries in Africa, the Middle East, South America, and elsewhere are becoming louder and bolder in their demands for justice for Palestinians, and for the equal application of international law.

SCO meet

A big day for Pakistan, given its past challenges, today's 23rd Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) Summit in Islamabad brings together top leaders from member states to address critical regional issues. Established by China and Russia, the SCO has evolved into a significant intergovernmental platform, focusing on political, economic, defense, and security matters in Eurasia. For Pakistan, this summit represents more than a rotational obligation – it is a crucial moment for strengthening regional ties, enhancing economic cooperation, and demonstrating its capacity to host high-profile multilateral events. The summit will also see the rare visit of Indian Foreign Minister S Jaishankar to Pakistan, making this the first such high-level diplomatic engagement between the two countries in nearly a decade. Given the persistent tensions between Pakistan and India, particularly over security concerns and allegations of cross-border terrorism, this visit alone adds a layer of geopolitical importance to the summit. How both nations engage, even indirectly, will be closely watched by observers, as it could set the tone for future bilateral interactions, including the upcoming Champions Trophy, which Pakistan is slated to host next year.

Pakistan has gone to great lengths to ensure the security of Islamabad during the summit, implementing lockdown measures and a heightened military presence to prevent any untoward incidents. This is not only to protect the integrity of the SCO moot but also to send a strong message: Pakistan can guarantee the safety of such events, despite the challenges posed by ongoing security concerns, including recent terrorist incidents. The focus on China is unavoidable. Pakistan's relationship with China has deepened significantly in recent years, primarily due to the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC), which has been a linchpin of Pakistan's economic recovery. The visit of Chinese Premier Li Qiang, who arrived in Rawalpindi for a four-day visit, underscores the importance of Sino-Pak relations. China's presence at the SCO Summit also reflects its growing influence in the region, and for Pakistan, this relationship is critical, especially as it seeks to pivot from traditional Western alliances toward a more multipolar global stance. However, while this shift may raise eyebrows in the West – especially in Washington – Pakistan has reiterated its commitment to maintaining balanced diplomatic relations, striving not to side exclusively with any global power bloc.

The economic agenda of the SCO Summit is equally significant for Pakistan. After years of economic instability, the country has seen the first signs of recovery, and bolstering trade and investment ties with SCO nations, particularly China and Russia, is essential to sustaining this momentum. The summit offers an opportunity for Pakistan to promote CPEC's success and advocate for greater regional economic cooperation, positioning itself as a key player in connecting Eurasia's markets through its strategic geography. While the summit's outcomes will be measured by its discussions on trade, security, and economic cooperation, its success will also be judged by Pakistan's ability to host a seamless, incident-free event. Observers have noted that if Pakistan successfully navigates the logistical and security challenges posed by the summit, it will be seen as a significant diplomatic win, especially given the country's long hiatus from hosting such high-profile multilateral conferences. This could also neutralize India's perennial claims of security risks in Pakistan, which are often cited as pretexts for avoiding bilateral engagements.

However, political distractions loom on the horizon. The PTI has called for a protest today, coinciding with the summit – viewed by many as a reckless and poorly timed attempt to disrupt the government's efforts to showcase Pakistan's diplomatic capabilities. While protests are a legitimate form of political expression, the timing raises concerns about undermining the country's international standing at a moment when national unity and a cohesive front are most needed. With the world watching, Pakistan has a unique opportunity to prove itself as a capable host, a pivotal regional player, and a country committed to fostering peace, security, and economic cooperation in Eurasia.

Karachi protests

Being a progressive in Pakistan is not easy. One is often engaged in an uphill battle to prove that they are not some kind of spy or subversive agent of the West, withstand threats of violence and actual violence from regressive elements and, all the while, deal with a state that is more interested in finding ways to shut you down than protect your rights. The nature of this struggle was on full display this past Sunday (October 13, 2024) in Karachi when protesters part of the 'Sindh Rawadari March' clashed with police outside the press club while resisting arrests for violating Section 144, which was imposed the previous day by the Karachi commissioner. The march was held in protest of the killing of Dr Shah Nawaz Kunhar who was gunned down by the Mirpurkhas police in a reportedly staged encounter on September 19 after being accused of blasphemy. According to social media posts, the police apparently ended up rough-handling the Rawadari March protesters, an act that has rightly been condemned across a spectrum of civil society actors. Meanwhile, a counter-protest held by the Tehreek-e-Labbaik Pakistan (TLP) also led to clashes with the police. Section 144 was imposed in the context of the Shanghai Cooperation Summit in Islamabad, which kicks off today.

The Sindh Human Rights Commission (SHRC) has found that Dr Kunhar was wrongfully identified as a blasphemy suspect likely due to "systemic flaws in the FIR registration process", leading to his death. One can understand why many would want to protest such blatant injustice. Section 144 can only be applied in urgent cases where there is a clear threat of danger. In this case, the threat of violence appears to have emanated from the potential of clashes between those protesting against Dr Kunhar's killing and the counter-protesters and the overall need to avoid such incidents given the SCO Summit.

Pakistan needs to show that it is capable of hosting large international events and cannot be held hostage by political instability. However, it often appears as though there is never a right moment for progressive voices to be heard in the country. They can be silenced in the name of avoiding violence and instability when it is other elements causing said violence and instability. Meanwhile, the country is no stranger to regressive elements simply ignoring any directions from the state when it comes to holding protests and getting off with a slap on the wrist. They also seem to enjoy a free hand when it comes to threatening others and leveling false accusations against them. All of this leads to an environment where those marching for rights and justice can be the most likely to be deprived of them. And as important as maintaining stability is, Pakistan is unlikely to make much progress if the state continues to take this lopsided approach.

What does the SCO Summit offer us?

The Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) has become a powerful regional forum, bringing together countries with significant geopolitical and economic influence.

Founded in 2001, the SCO initially aimed to address security concerns, particularly in Central Asia. Over time, it has broadened its focus to include economic collaboration, energy cooperation, and infrastructure development, enhancing its potential to influence the Eurasian geopolitics as well as geoeconomics.

The organisation spans about 60 per cent of the Eurasian landmass and includes over 40 per cent of the global population. With major economic powers like China and Russia; four nuclear powers (China, Russia, Pakistan, and India); and energy-rich Russia, Iran, and Central Asian Countries, the SCO offers an alternative to Western-dominated platforms.

Starting today, Pakistan is hosting the SCO Council of Heads of Government Meeting, bringing together seven prime ministers, a vice president, and a foreign minister. This is a clear demonstration of Pakistan's strong regional standing and diplomatic influence. Hosting the summit allows Pakistan to demonstrate its stability and security capabilities, sending a strong message that the country remains a crucial regional player, despite some complicated external and internal challenges.

Economically, hosting the SCO summit holds great promise for Pakistan. The SCO has been actively promoting regional trade and investment among its member states. Trade within the bloc has surged from $336 billion in 2019 to $490 billion in 2023, signaling the growing interdependence among members. Mindful that it has not fully explored the potential for intra-SCO trade, Pakistan aims to benefit significantly from this, especially through the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) which positions Pakistan as a strategic trade hub, connecting it to China and Central Asia.

The summit allows Pakistan to push forward connectivity projects that could help mitigate its economic challenges. Specifically, Pakistan could seek greater investment in infrastructure, deepen trade partnerships, and negotiate cooperation on energy (including renewables) and technology transfer with SCO members.

This year's SCO summit is particularly significant given the wider geopolitical context. The Ukraine war, the escalating conflict in the Middle East, and the ongoing tensions around Iran have shifted global priorities. The summit will offer an alternative platform for dialogue on these issues, distinct from many Western-dominated forums.

So why is the timing of the Islamabad Summit important? The answer is quite straightforward: China's, as well as India's, booming trade with Russia has been its lifeline so far and now it is looking to further strengthen its ties within the SCO as Western sanctions continue to strain its economy. Meanwhile, China, facing tariffs and trade restrictions from the US and its allies, is increasingly seeking to enhance regional cooperation with SCO partners as part of its broader strategy to diversify its global economic partnerships.

Iran, another SCO member under heavy Western sanctions, will also look to deepen its economic ties with neighbouring countries, particularly given the ongoing US pressure on its oil exports. Iran is also negotiating a strategic partnership with Russia, especially Su-35 fighter jets, to strengthen its defence against Israel.

Western tariffs on Chinese products and sanctions on Russia and Iran have opened up opportunities for the SCO to develop its own economic mechanisms, including exploring the options to gradually de-dollarise its economies.

Against this backdrop, the SCO's potential as an indigenous forum for discussing this region's issues and challenges becomes even more important. Pakistan can position itself as a key transit hub for trade between these major economies, further boosting its role as a bridge between South Asia, Central Asia, and beyond. For example, Russian energy resources and Chinese investments in infrastructure, especially through the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) and CPEC, can play a critical role in stabilising Pakistan's energy sector and boosting its economic growth.

To capitalise upon the recent rise in trade among SCO members, Pakistan could push for reduced tariffs, simplified customs procedures, and enhanced connectivity

The previous SCO summit, held in India in 2023, addressed key areas such as counterterrorism, economic cooperation, and climate change. A major outcome was the enhancement of the Regional Anti-Terrorism Structure (RATS), which facilitates intelligence sharing and coordinated efforts to combat terrorism, extremism, and separatism. For Pakistan, this aligns with its own security concerns, particularly with ongoing threats from groups like the Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan (TTP).

On the economic front, the India summit discussed reducing trade barriers and boosting investment among member states, but India's 'Make in India' initiative and cautious approach to SCO integration limited progress. Geopolitical tensions, particularly between India and China, and India and Pakistan overshadowed efforts to enhance regional cooperation and undercut the summit's effectiveness.

In Islamabad, Pakistan will have an opportunity to build on these discussions, particularly in areas where progress stalled. Counterterrorism will remain a priority, with RATS likely to be further strengthened. As a frontline state in the fight against terrorism, Pakistan is expected to push for deeper cooperation in intelligence sharing against militancy. Economically, Pakistan can use the summit to advocate for trade liberalisation and investment promotion within the SCO. Infrastructure projects, particularly those linked to CPEC, will likely dominate the agenda.

To capitalise upon the recent rise in trade among SCO members, Pakistan could push for reduced tariffs, simplified customs procedures, and enhanced connectivity through joint infrastructure financing. Joint ventures in renewable energy could also be on the table, particularly in light of global concerns over climate change.

Despite the opportunities, one must remain realistic about the summit's potential outcomes. While collaboration is possible, the SCO has often struggled to implement its decisions, largely due to competing interests among its member states. The rivalry between China and India, and India and Pakistan, may once again limit progress.

The verbal duel between India and Pakistan's foreign ministers at the 2023 SCO summit significantly impacted the event's overall atmosphere, and effectively dashed hopes for any thaw in India-Pakistan relations. In Islamabad, expectations remain similarly low for any breakthrough, as the SCO is a multilateral forum not focused on bilateral disputes between member states. However, it remains to be seen whether the encounter between the two foreign ministers this time will further strain their relationship or simply maintain the status quo.

Western countries, particularly the US, view the SCO with caution. Deepening partnership among Russia, China, and Iran further intensifies their concerns about the organisation's geopolitical influence and direction. Nonetheless, Western opposition is not absolute. The US and its allies monitor the SCO, particularly in areas of military cooperation and regional security.

Pakistan will need to carefully balance its SCO membership with its relationships with Western powers, particularly the US, which remains an important economic and security partner. However, beyond external dynamics, internal political tensions could also undermine Pakistan's ability to fully capitalise on the summit's opportunities.

At this crucial moment, both the government and opposition parties should recognise the significance of hosting key regional powers and refrain from actions or rhetoric that could cast a negative light on Pakistan in front of visiting dignitaries. This is a time for unity and responsibility, not for political point-scoring, to ensure that Pakistan's standing on the global stage is enhanced rather than tarnished.

Although many decisions from previous SCO summits have yet to be fully implemented, the forum plays a vital role in ensuring the world remains multipolar. Its presence may not always deliver immediate or tangible results, but its absence would significantly undermine efforts to maintain a balance of power on the global stage. The SCO's role in fostering cooperation among major regional powers is crucial in countering unilateral dominance and promoting a more balanced international order.

Let us cherish and celebrate the SCO summit in this context, as it offers a rare platform for collective wisdom from the leadership of 40 per cent of the world's population. The question now is: can this collective wisdom turn into a shared vision to steer the future of global cooperation and balance of power?

Forgotten terror

Derek Leebaert

The martial law imposed on the Arab population in Israel since the founding of the state was lifted in 1966, but Jimmy Carter described the conditions imposed on Palestinians in the occupied Palestinian territory after the beginning of illegal Israeli settlement there as "apartheid".

With nothing resolved by 1982, Prime Minister Begin, a former Irgun terrorist against British authorities, vowed to "destroy" the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). He oversaw then-Defence Minister Ariel Sharon's killing of some 18,000 Palestinians and Lebanese, overwhelmingly civilians, in Beirut. Belatedly, Reagan stopped the slaughter with a phone call, given Israel's dependence. It was then that he described the Israeli onslaught as a "holocaust".

Despite using a word with such weight, however, the White House did not demand the UN censure Israel. The US had not attempted to sanction Israel even over its illegal settlements which spawned from the 1967 war. Israeli Ambassador to the US Michael Oren explained why in his 2007 book, Power, Faith, and Fantasy: America in the Middle East 1776 to the Present.

In the mid-1970s, he wrote, Israel's supporters began to achieve "the financial and political clout necessary to sway congressional opinion" – meaning that they had acquired enough power to impede US official opposition to Israel at the UN or elsewhere. Ever since, Israel has taken US backing for granted, no matter the record of wildly disproportionate atrocities.

In 1991, Israeli Prime Minister Itzhak Shamir, who had approved the murder of UN negotiator Folke Bernadotte, tried to explain why terrorism was "acceptable" for Jews, but not Arabs: Palestinians are "fighting for land that is not theirs. This is the land of the people of Israel."

Hamas's October 7 attack on Israel was distinct. It was the only time that Palestinian resistance groups were able to react to decades of Israeli terror on a similar scale. In response to the attack, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu simply doubled down on Israel's recurring massacre-making, now backed by starvation and disease. The US administration took no meaningful action to stop "plausible genocide."

At this time, Israel has also become the only entity in the world that Washington allows to kill US citizens with impunity. The ever-growing list from the West Bank includes Aysenur Ezgi Eygi, Mohammad Khmour, and Shireen Abu Akleh – each killed with a shot to the head. No sanctions or renditions followed their deaths. The White House simply suggested the sniper-killings were "not acceptable" and asked Israel to "investigate" itself. The issue was swiftly dismissed.

As Gaza's torment enters its second year, Israel's killing has reached unprecedented levels in the West Bank, and Lebanon once again becomes a target of Israel's self-described retaliation. More is needed from Israel's patron than mutterings to perhaps halt some arms shipments. Washington should not only stop upholding Israeli brutality, which includes apartheid but, like the UK, it can support the pending International Criminal Court indictments which are to, finally, include an Israeli prime minister.

Past US presidents had tried to reign in Israeli behaviour of the sort that statesman Abba Eban came to describe, during Israel's previous bombing of Beirut, as "wantonly inflicting every possible measure of death and anguish on civilian populations." Time is overdue for Washington's decisionmakers to follow those presidents' examples, and to rescind diplomatic protection as well as weapons exports for Israel.

Educational catastrophe

All are aware of the MDCAT 2024 controversy. It is a shame to see such a prestigious examination being surrounded by allegations of cheating and corruption. Now and then we face issues ranging from problems within curriculums to a lack of management in the education sector at the national level.

Medicine, engineering, and IT are some of the most reputed fields of study in the country, producing hundreds of amazing doctors, engineers, and computer scientists every year. If such allegations keep on being made without any actions taken by the government and authorities, it won't be long before Pakistan stops producing these professionals altogether.

In need of counselling

A significant number of students are navigating through an education system that often leaves them feeling directionless. Many find themselves changing fields multiple times without a clear understanding of their interests and strengths, leading to confusion and wasted resources. This trend underscores an urgent need for effective career counselling to be integrated into the educational framework from an early stage. Implementing career counselling programs within schools can provide students with the necessary tools to make informed decisions about their future.

These programmes should focus on assessing individual strengths, interests, and potential career paths that align with the skills they develop throughout their education. By introducing career counselling early in the academic journey, we can empower students to explore various fields and make educated choices about their futures. Moreover, collaborations between educational institutions and industry professionals can create a more robust counselling framework. Workshops, internships, and mentorship opportunities can bridge the gap between education and real-world experiences, giving students a clearer picture of potential careers.

No farewell

Chief Justice Qazi Faez Isa has reportedly refused to accept a farewell party before his official retirement on October 25. This is a highly commendable and wise decision on the part of the CJP as such farewells involve a significant expense.

It is better to spend this amount on welfare organisations providing free medical care and education to the people. Hats off to the CJP for setting this example.

SCO agenda

The upcoming Shanghai Cooperation Organization Summit 2024 in Islamabad is a matter of pride for all Pakistanis. There are discussions taking place among intellectuals and policymakers regarding the outcomes of the efforts made so far since its inception. One of the issues is India's apparent waning interest in pursuing the SCO's main objective of promoting regional connectivity, which warrants resolution of territorial and border disputes.

Consequently, the Indo-Pak and Indo-China territorial/border disputes linger on, frustrating regional connectivity. Security challenges emanating from Afghanistan also present major barriers. Hopefully, these issues will be given serious consideration in the upcoming summit.

No more non-filers

This letter refers to the news report 'FBR to abolish non-filer category, tightens curbs on tax dodgers' (September 25, 2024). This move is part of a broader strategy to enforce stricter rules on those who don't file tax returns. The non-filer category was introduced as an attempt to incentivize individuals to become tax filers by imposing higher taxes on non-filers for certain transactions, but it badly failed to achieve its objectives. It is important to understand the reasons why people would rather pay higher tax instead of filing tax returns. The complex procedures, fear of being harassed by tax officials, audits and inspections, perception of government corruption and misuse of funds, and lack of tangible benefits discourage people from becoming tax filers. An easier and user-friendly tax filing system such as through mobile apps or ATM-style submission centres would help. Flat tax rates or unified tax brackets for certain income levels could eliminate complicated calculations and deductions. Tax officials must also be subject to scrutiny from independent bodies, minimizing opportunities for bribes or misconduct.

Crushing defeat

This letter refers to the news story 'England crush Pakistan by innings, 47 runs in commanding Test victory' (October 11, 2024). It is baffling how a test match that saw over 500 runs scored in the first innings and over 800 runs in the second innings still delivered a result on the fifth day.

The Pakistan team made a mess of a game that should have ended in a draw and their ability to close games out appears to be declining. Test cricket requires temperament, resilience and, above all, patience. It seems our players lose their patience and are in some kind of hurry. This has to change.

Bilawal launches
Benazir Hari Card

Speaking at the Chief Minister House here, he said Benazir Income Support Programme (BISP) introduced by the previous PPP government, had become a global example of financial assistance for women.

He said the PPP Sindh government was now introducing the Benazir Hari Card, and recalled that it was the vision of the late Benazir Bhutto to see the farmers becoming the main beneficiaries of the Hari Card.

He said before Asif Ali Zardari's first tenure as president, the economic conditions of farmers were critical, but thanks to his (Zardari's) decisions that an agricultural revolution had been brought about within a year and the farmers prospered, and the entire economy stood on its own feet.

"Today, when we review our economy, every segment of the society seems distressed and facing hardships," he said, adding, "As elected representatives, it is our responsibility to solve your problems, and that is why the people have chosen us."

Bilawal condemned the conspiracy being hatched by mafias, large business groups, industrialists, and international forces to deregulate the agriculture sector.

He noted that proposing deregulation of the farming sector was a non-sense idea at present when climate change had endangered human lives.

He demanded that government withdraw billions of rupees worth of subsidies being given to the fertilizer manufacturers and give it directly to the growers to help them fight any intrigue against the farming sector.

He described investment in agriculture as the only path to national development.

17 months

head has been vacant since May 5, 2023. The post fell vacant after the resignation of Habib-ul-Hamman Gilani.

The Ministry of Religious Affairs advertised the post. After shortlisting, the selection board conducted interviews of 23 applicants on April 23, 2024, under the leadership of Federal Religious Affairs Minister Chaudhry Salik Hussain. The selection board sent a panel of three candidates to the federal cabinet for approval. The panel consisted of Brigadier (ret'd) Mumtaz Iqbal, Federal Secretary (ret'd) Habib-ul-

Hamman Gilani and Secretary (ret'd) Ijaz Ahmed. The cabinet approved the panel but ordered that reports of the three candidates be called from intelligence agencies.

A summary was sent to the cabinet on July 20, 2024, but the report was returned by the Cabinet Division on the basis that according to intelligence reports, none of the three candidates is suitable for the post. The federal cabinet rejected the panel sent by the selection board for the appointment and directed to start a new process. However, it has not started yet.

Environment watchdog fails to classify industrial units

Audit report recommends classification of industrial units, preparation of environmental database

By Sajid Chaudhry

ISLAMABAD: It has been revealed that the Pakistan Environmental Protection Agency (Pak-EPA) has not done classification of industrial units.

According to the audit report, according to Rule 4 of the National Environment Quality Standards (Self-Monitoring and Reporting by Industry) Rules 2001, the director general will classify any unit as A, B or C based on the pollution level of the industrial unit.

According to Rule 3, all industrial units will be responsible for submitting accurate and timely environmental monitoring reports to the federal agency. Rule 12 states that the federal agency shall compile, analyse and manage the data contained in environmental monitoring reports with the purpose of implementing national quality standards and developing an environmental database.

The Pak-EPA had been established for the protection, maintenance and improvement of the environment and prevention of pollution; however, during the audit of the financial year 2021-22 to 2022-23, it was revealed that the Pak-EPA did not classify industrial units into category A, B or C for liquid emissions and A or B for gaseous emissions, while on the other hand, industrial units were not submitting monthly, quarterly and annual environmental monitoring reports.

The audit termed the initiative of not classifying the industrial units as a serious lapse on the part of the management and said that as a result the compilation, analysis and development of the environmental database of the Islamabad Capital Territory was not carried out. The audit issued a preliminary observation in this regard on 25 August 2023, to which the management replied that the industrial units are classified as per the Pakistan Environmental Protection Act 1987 which differentiates between liquid and gaseous emissions.

Industrial facilities within the Islamabad Capital Territory are located in three different zones out of five, some industries submit approved environmental compliance reports to the Pak-EPA. Notices will be issued to ensure that industries submit comprehensive environmental compliance reports, including management and data analysis. The audit described the administration's response as unsatisfactory, saying that details of all classified units operating under the territorial jurisdiction of the Pak-EPA were not provided. The administration admitted that all the industrial units were not submitting monitoring reports due to which the environmental database was not prepared. The audit wrote three letters from the PAO to convene a meeting of the Departmental Accounts Committee, but the meeting was not called until the finalisation of the report. The audit recommended that the industrial units should be classified and a mechanism should be devised for reporting these units on a monthly, quarterly and yearly basis, in addition to the preparation of an environmental database.

Targets aimed at eradicating poverty and achieving economic stability will be accomplished," said Chief Minister Maryam Nawaz, in her message regarding the SCO, which begins in Islamabad today.

"This summit will prove to be a game-changer for Pakistan," said Maryam Nawaz. She welcomed the foreign dignitaries and said that the presence of foreign leaders in Pakistan is a very positive sign. "This summit will open new horizons of cooperation," she said.

By Asif Mehmood Butt

LAHORE: For the first time in the history of Punjab, the implementation of the program for the establishment of micro-libraries and the construction of "City Walls" to highlight the culture of small towns has been started.

The program has been started from Wazirabad, a literary and commercial city of Punjab. According to the details received by "Jang" about the Chief Minister's "Read Punjab Programme", racks containing books of micro-libraries have been placed in all public parks, waiting areas of bus and railway stations in Wazirabad.

FBR tightens noose around potential tax dodgers

Arrests five persons for creating dummy companies involved in huge tax frauds

By Mehtab Haider

ISLAMABAD: The Federal Board of Revenue (FBR) has launched a crackdown against potential tax dodgers involved in multi-billion rupees tax frauds in different parts of the country.

The FBR's Regional Directorates of Intelligence & Investigation of Inland Revenues arrested five accused across the country on Monday, including one of the leading alleged fraudsters engaged in creating chains of dummy businesses, and four members of top management of end users/ beneficiaries Chief Financial Officers (CFOs) responsible for the tax fraud involving billions of sales tax loss to the national exchequer.

While taking action in a registered FIR involving billions of sales tax fraud, the Directorate of Intelligence & Investigation-Inland Revenue, Hyderabad, arrested the CFO and purchase officer of a leading Lahore-based battery manufacturer on charges of abetment/ connivance in sales tax fraud by claiming fake input tax.

In the intelligence-based operation, the Hyderabad team was assisted by the Lahore directorate. The revenue loss caused by the arrested accused alone is more than a billion to the national exchequer. In a separate operation, the Faisalabad Directorate of Intelligence & Investigation-Inland Revenue arrested CFOs of Two sister concerns and a leading Faisalabad-based textile unit on the charges of abetment/ connivance in sales tax fraud by claiming fake input tax on coal.

The revenue loss caused by the fraudulent practices involving a gang of fraudsters runs in hundreds of millions of rupees. An FIR had already been registered against the suppliers, beneficiaries, connivers, and others.

In another development, the pre-arrest bail of accused Taswar Shahid, nominated in FIRs, was rejected by the court on Oct 14. Subsequently, he was arrested from outside the courtroom. He is a leading member of the alleged gang operating fake and dummy units for generating fake sales tax input, which is used by the end users/beneficiaries.

The arrests have been exected in the wake of the country-wide crackdown against the organised mafia and beneficiaries involved in sales tax fraud and in line with FBR's enforcement measures to enhance tax compliance.

The FBR high-ups allegedly found that the input tax was misused for fake/ flying invoices and causing huge losses to the national exchequer.

According to the details available with The News, the FBR got information about substantial sales tax fraud/ evasion committed by members of an association of persons (AOP) by way of non-payment of due taxes, adjusting inadmissible input tax on fake/ flying invoices and facilitating its buyers by providing a platform for unlawful input tax adjustment on the strength of fake/ bogus invoices.

These AOPs declared purchase of coal from such suppliers who have not declared purchase in the relevant HS Code. The scrutiny of records shows that the registered person received payments against supplies made to its buyers in a bank account and the same amount was transferred to the supplier. The whole management of bank transactions has been made to fraudulently fulfill the conditions of Section 73 of the Sales Tax Act 1990.

The sales tax return of the AOPs shows that during tax periods from 2020 to 2023, the registered person declared sales of Rs2,051,372 million involving output tax of Rs153,436 million, whereas the registered person has deposited Rs29,085 million during the said tax periods. The registered person declared huge purchases of Rs1,865,301 millions involving input tax of Rs128,410.

The scrutiny of the record indicates that prima facie, one involved entity made supplies to the registered persons by issuing fake output tax invoices (mere paper transactions) through the e-system of FBR to its buyers enabling them to adjust illegal input tax and caused heavy loss to the tune of Rs356,830 million to the national exchequer which constitutes tax fraud as defined in section 2(37) of the Sales Tax Act 1990, an offense punishable under section 33(13) of the Sales Tax Act 1990.

How to raise fact-checkers — learning from Finland

By Dr Ayesha Razzaque (Educationist)

In a recent news report, CBS News visited a Finnish elementary school where media and information literacy are integral to the curriculum, beginning as early as six years of age.

In the story, a group of 10-year-olds demonstrated a command of languages, both Finnish and English, and could ask critical questions to separate facts from fiction. In one example, a student told the host that he did not believe the news that aliens landed on Earth 10 years ago. If they had, his reasoning went, someone would have seen them by now.

In another instance, a student assessed a webpage that claimed the 2020 US elections were rigged. She identified the source as a far-right website with a track record of publishing disinformation which left her sceptical about the report's veracity.

According to the Finnish Minister of Education, the country considers media literacy a basic civic skill in today's digital world and the foundation of its democracy in today's world of propaganda and fake news.

Disinformation is far from a new phenomenon. The earliest historical instance of disinformation/ malinformation was when the serpent in the Garden of Eden misled Adam (a.s.) and Eve (a.s.) into eating the forbidden fruit from the Tree of Knowledge which saw them expelled from Heaven.

Since then, every new communication technology — from handwritten books to the printing press, newspapers, radio, television, the Internet, social media platforms, and, most recently, Generative AI tools capable of generating text, images, and videos — has contributed to lowering the cost of dissemination per idea while simultaneously spreading them faster and wider. Since none of these technologies will be rolled back any time soon, the best defense against disinformation is an informed and aware citizenry.

Information and media literacy (IML) enables people to process information critically, spot bias and identify instances of unintentional misinformation and intentional disinformation and misinformation, popularized as 'fake news'. However, basic literacy remains a prerequisite of IML which we, as a nation, continue to struggle with.

In February of this year, market research company Ipsos published the results of a survey it conducted for Voice of America titled 'Political participation and landscape of Pakistani youth'. Among the key findings of the survey was that while most women get their news from TV, men prefer to turn to social media platforms.

Among social media platforms, 46 per cent were reported to rely on WhatsApp, followed by 40 per cent using Facebook, and eight per cent turning to Twitter / X. WhatsApp is by virtue of being an IM platform unmoderated. The user experience of social media platforms differs significantly from one market to the next. For the Pakistani market, moderation of Facebook and Twitter / X content is barely detectable — that is: overflowing with disinformation.

IML gets only a token mention in school curricula. Variants of a much-feted curriculum included scattered mentions of media literacy that tied it narrowly to Grade VII and VIII computer studies. The stated outcome was to "Evaluate digital media bias and messaging". However, soon after that, the realization struck that most public schools do not have computers, not to speak of Internet access. Only 81 per cent of children start school in grade I, and only approximately 40 per cent of those reach grade VIII, and in turn only a small fraction of those will have the privilege of attending a school with the resources to teach computer studies. This is the footprint of IML education in public schools.

In 2019, Unesco published a broad set of guidelines in a report titled 'Global standards for media and information literacy curricula development guidelines' and the North-South Centre of the Council of Europe published a ready-to-use toolkit for 'Media Literacy for Global Education'. Most suggested activities in that toolkit require pen and paper and the ability to stomach conflicting opinions.

While access to the internet enables additional learning activities, IML does not depend on access to computers and the Internet. Essential elements of it have been part of school curricula in many countries for decades.

Middle school children in Western Europe have been sensitized to the political leanings of their local and national newspapers by comparing a day's news coverage, spotting biased language describing the same events, and learning to discern between objective reporting, opinion, sensationalism, and outright propaganda as part of their language subjects. Beyond an isolated lesson, reading texts critically is embedded across school curriculums, particularly in history, literature, and more sensitive subjects.

Our state's conflicted attitude towards combating the epidemic of disinformation/ fake news is complicated by the fact that today almost every party — where the term 'party' is used in the broadest sense — has a hand in feeding narratives and commentary with various degrees of slant into the social media machine. Surviving it requires the ability to think critically and that is a rare beast in a country where many are stumped by sarcasm.

This begs the question: could the public school curriculum itself, long known for its indoctrinating effect, survive scrutiny by a critically thinking populace? Are the people in power prepared for its implications?

Sara's father tells UK police he 'legally punished' her, but she died

Taxi driver Urfan Sharif, Beinash Batool, Faisal Malik fled to Pakistan last August after Sara Sharif's death

By Murtaza Ali Shah

LONDON: The father of Sara Sharif fled to Pakistan after allegedly killing the 10-year-old and called police to say "I legally punished her and she died", the jury at the Old Bailey heard at the opening of the trial.

Taxi driver Urfan Sharif, 42, is on trial at the Old Bailey accused of her murder alongside Sara's stepmother, Beinash Batool, 30, and uncle, Faisal Malik, 28.

Prosecutor William Emlyn Jones KC, opening their trial, said all the defendants had played a part in a "campaign of abuse" against Sara leading to her tragic death.

He told jurors that doctors found Sara had dozens of injuries including extensive bruising, burns and broken bones after her body was found in bed at her home in Woking, Surrey, on August 10 last year. The discovery came, said the prosecution, after her father called police at 2:47am crying so much that the operator told him to "take a deep breath and tell me what happened".

Sharif told the operator: "I've killed my daughter. I legally punished her, and she died. She was naughty. I beat her up, it wasn't my intention to kill her, but I beat her up too much."

The call lasted for around nine minutes.

When the police reached the family home in Woking, just out of London, they found the property was quiet and clean.

The prosecutor, Emlyn Jones, said: "In an upstairs bedroom, on a bottom bunk bed, the police found the body of a little girl, lying in bed, under the cover, as if asleep. But she was not asleep. She was dead. Next to her body was a note in Urfan Sharif's handwriting. It echoed what he had said in that 990 call."

The note stated: "It's me Urfan Sharif who killed my daughter by beating. I swear to God that my intention was not to kill her. But I lost it."

"I am running away because I am scared. Sara died last August 8, two days before she was found."

The following day, the whole family fled on a flight out of the UK, landing in Pakistan on August 10, meaning Sharif was thousands of miles away when he made the call to police, the court heard.

An examination of Sara's body revealed that Sharif played down in his call how much the child was tortured.

He said: "Sara had not just been beaten up. Her treatment, certainly in the last few weeks of her life, had been appalling. It had been brutal. And throughout, these three defendants were the adults living in the house where Sara had lived, where she had suffered, and where she had died. All three defendants played their part in the violence and it was inconceivable that just one of them had acted alone."

Addressing the jury, Emlyn Jones said: "Ask yourselves, how could just one person have carried out so much abuse, so many assaults, without the others knowing about it and witnessing it with their own eyes? If any one of them was not part of it, but had seen it, why then was nothing done to stop it, or report it? Each of them denies that they were the one responsible for any of that violence and abuse. Each of them seeks to deflect the blame onto one or both of the others, to shift responsibility away from themselves, onto someone else. In other words, they are pointing the finger at each other."

Sharif's case was that his wife, Batool, was responsible for Sara's death, that he made a false confession to protect her; Batool accused Sharif of being a violent disciplinarian and she was fearful of her husband; and Malik's case is that whoever was responsible it was not him and he was unaware of what was going on, the jury heard.

The defendants have denied murder and causing or allowing the death of a child between December 16, 2022 and August 9, 2023. The trial before Justice Cavanagh is due to go on until December 13.

Sri Lanka carrier grounds captain after mid-air argument

COLOMBO: Sri Lanka's national airline grounded a captain after he locked out his female copilot when she took a toilet break during a flight from Sydney to Colombo, officials said.

Sri Lanka's aviation regulator, the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA), had initiated an investigation. "The airline is fully cooperating with the relevant authorities, and the captain has been grounded pending the outcome of the investigation," SriLankan Airlines said in a statement.

The captain clashed with the female copilot over her stepping out without arranging another crew member to accompany him in the cockpit, in line with standard operating procedures, an airline source said.

Cabin crew had to persuade the captain to let the first officer back into her seat on the Airbus A330. The two-pilot aircraft landed without incident. —AFP

Ex-Stasi officer jailed over 1974 Berlin border killing

BERLIN: A former East German secret police officer was sentenced to 10 years in jail in a landmark ruling on Monday for shooting dead a Polish man trying to flee to the West 50 years ago.

The sentence, almost 35 years after the Berlin Wall fell, marks the first time a former Stasi officer has been convicted of a homicide committed on duty, according to historians.

The Berlin court found Martin Manfred Naumann, 80, guilty of murder for shooting Czeslaw Kukuczka in the back at close range as he sought to flee through Berlin's Friedrichstrasse border point in 1974. —AFP

Prague bans organised night-time pub crawls

PRAGUE: Prague city councillors said on Monday they had banned night-time pub crawls organised by travel agencies because the city wanted to target "more cultured" tourists.

The Czech capital of 1.3 million people has for a long time been a popular destination for noisy stag parties and pub crawls, largely from Britain.

Prague deputy mayor Zdenek Hrib told reporters on Monday that organised night-time pub crawls would now be banned. —AFP

Nasa probe Europa Clipper lifts off for Jupiter's icy moon

KENNEDY SPACE CENTRE, United States: Nasa probe Europa Clipper lifted off from the US Kennedy Space Centre on Monday, bound for an icy moon of Jupiter to discover whether it has the ingredients to support life.

Lift-off took place aboard SpaceX's powerful Falcon Heavy rocket. The probe is set to reach Europa, one of Jupiter's many moons, in five and a half years.

The mission will allow the US space agency to uncover new details about Europa, which scientists believe could hold an ocean beneath its iced-over surface.

"With Europa Clipper, we're not searching for life on Europa, but we're trying to see if this ocean world is habitable, and that means we're looking for the water," said Nasa official Gina DiBraccio, ahead of the launch.

"We're looking for energy sources, and we're really looking for the chemistry there, so that we can understand what habitable environments might be throughout our whole universe," she added.

If life's ingredients are found, another mission would then have to make the journey to try and detect it.

"It's a chance for us to explore not a world that might have been habitable billions of years ago" like Mars, Europa Clipper program scientist Curt Niebur told reporters, "but a world that might be habitable today, right now."

The probe is the largest ever designed by Nasa for interplanetary exploration.

BBC boss says Russia, China taking 'advantage' of World Service cuts

LONDON: The head of the BBC warned on Monday that Russia and China were exploiting funding cuts that have forced Britain's public broadcaster to scale back its much-lauded World Service network.

Tim Davie said in a speech that financial constraints affecting the BBC World Service were allowing Moscow, Beijing and other actors to "fill the gaps", including with "unchallenged propaganda".

"We can now see clear evidence of the fact that when the World Service retreats, state-funded media operators move in to take advantage," the director-general said.

The BBC World Service delivers output in 42 languages, and reaches around 320 million people worldwide every week.

For years it was funded through grants by the British government's foreign ministry. But since 2014, it has been predominantly funded by the television licence fee paid by British households.

In 2022 the BBC announced the closure of its Arabic and Persian radio services and hundreds of job cuts, and has increasingly moved language services to digital platforms.

Davie said that while the World Service's budget was nearly $400 million ($522 million), Russia and China were spending an estimated $6 billion to $8 billion on "expanding their global media activities" in Africa, the Middle East and Latin America.

"Russia and China are outspending our investment by a multiple of thousands," he told the Future Resilience Forum, a non-partisan meeting attended by international political figures.

"Across Africa in particular, Russian media is incredibly active in promoting its narratives -- with social media influencers amplifying propaganda and so-called 'activists' live-streaming pro-Russia rallies. —AFP

EU sanctions Iran over ballistic missiles for Russia

LUXEMBOURG: The European Union imposed sanctions on Monday against prominent Iranian officials and entities, including airlines, accused of taking part in the transfer of missiles and drones for Russia to use against Ukraine.

EU foreign ministers approved the sanctions on seven entities, including Iran Air, and seven individuals, including deputy defence minister Seyed Hamzeh Ghalandari and senior officials of the Revolutionary Guards' Quds Force, the bloc said.

Leading European powers Britain, France and Germany adopted similar sanctions last month over Iranian missile transfers to Russia, as did the United States.

European Commission president Ursula von der Leyen welcomed the adoption of the sanctions by the entire bloc, while adding: "More is needed."

"The Iranian regime's support to Russia's war of aggression against Ukraine is unacceptable and must stop," she posted on X.

Israel also lauded the move, with Foreign Minister Israel Katz posting on X that "These sanctions send a clear message that the international community will not tolerate Iran's dangerous actions, its support for terrorism, and its destabilisation of the region." —AFP

Climate pact needs 'hundreds of billions' in state money: COP29 hosts

PARIS: The hosts of the coming UN climate summit said on Monday that a hard-fought finance pact for poorer countries must include "hundreds of billions" of dollars from wealthy governments.

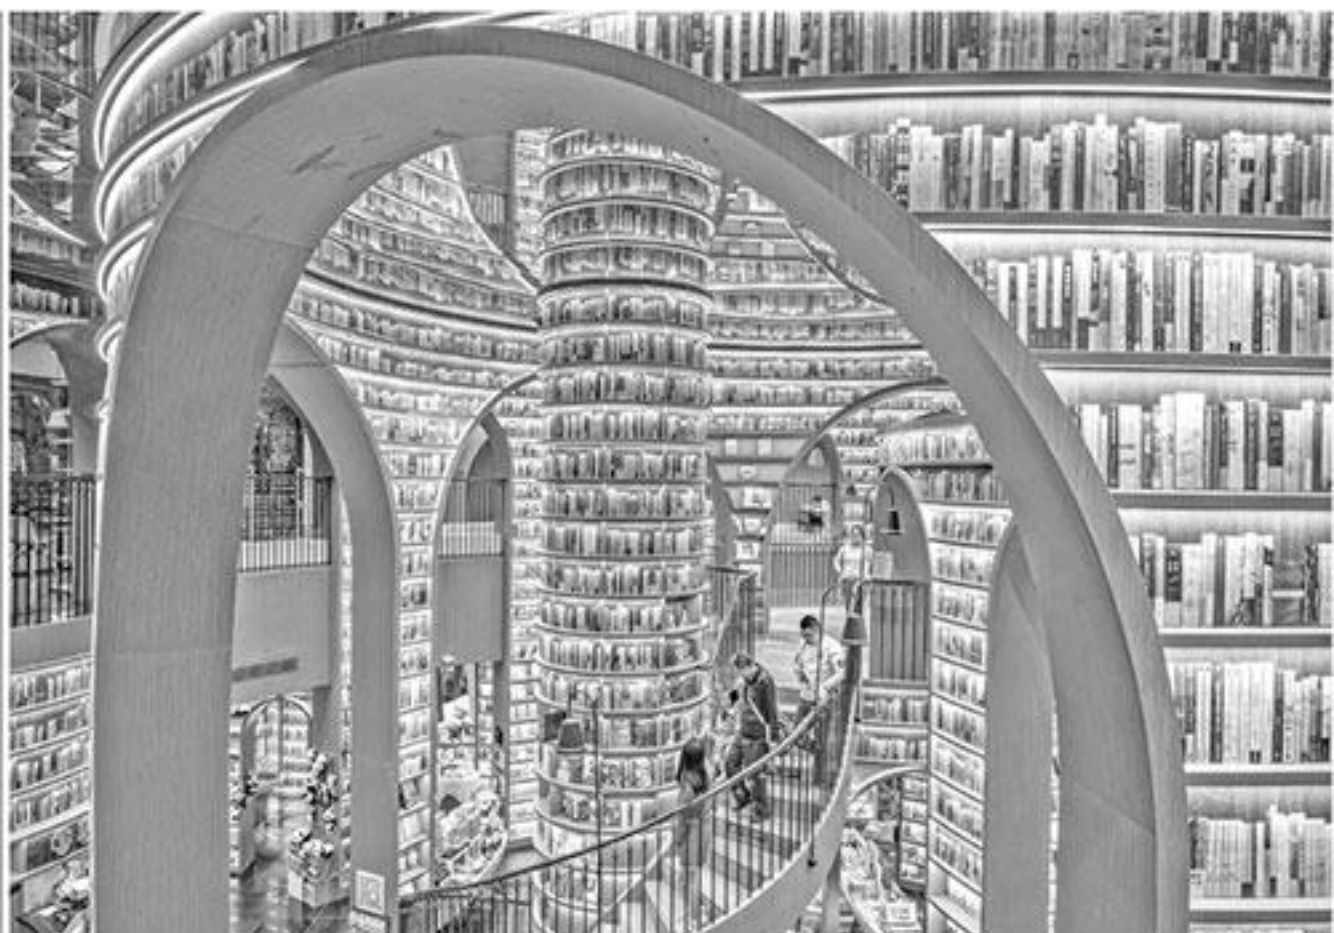

Nearly 200 countries are supposed to agree at COP29 how much money should flow every year from rich nations to poorer ones to help them prepare for climate change.

But little progress has been achieved so far in the negotiations, with disagreements over who should pay, how much, and the scope and structure of the pact.

COP29 hosts Azerbaijan held a series of meetings last week with diplomats to try to make headway ahead of the main summit starting on November 11.

Yalchin Rafiyev, Azerbaijan's lead climate negotiator, said "common messages" had started to emerge from the parties, including in terms of the overall size of the finance target.

"It needs to be ambitious, and that needs are in the space of trillions, with a realistic provision and mobilisation needing to be in the hundreds of billions," he told reporters during a conference call. —AFP

China insists won't renounce 'use of force' to take Taiwan as drills end

TAIPEI: China insisted on Monday it would never renounce the "use of force" to take control of Taiwan, after ending a day of military drills around the self-ruled island that Beijing said was a "stem warning" to "separatist" forces.

Beijing, which claims Taiwan as part of its own territory, deployed fighter jets, drones, warships and coast guard vessels to encircle the island in its fourth round of large-scale war games in just over two years.

The United States said China's actions were "unwarranted" and risked "escalation" as it called on Beijing to act with restraint.

China declared the drills over at around 6:00 pm (1000 GMT), about 13 hours after they had begun.

"We sincerely strive for the prospect of peaceful reunification, but we will never promise to renounce the use of force and will not leave any space for Taiwan independence," Ministry of National Defence spokesperson Wu Qian said soon after.

The exercises, dubbed Joint Sword-2024B, "fully tested the integrated joint operation capabilities of its troops", military spokesperson Captain Li Xi said in a statement.

President Lai Ching-te, who took office in May, has been more outspoken than his predecessor Tsai Ing-wen in defending Taiwan's sovereignty, angering Beijing, which calls him a "separatist".

Lai vowed on Monday to "protect democratic Taiwan and safeguard national security", while the defence ministry said it had dispatched "appropriate forces" in response to the drills.

Taiwan detected 125 Chinese aircraft, including fighter jets and drones from early morning to late afternoon, a defence ministry official said, describing it as a record for a single day. Seventeen warships were also spotted.

Outlying islands administered by Taipei had been put on "heightened alert", Taiwan's defence ministry said.

Beijing said its exercises served as a "stem warning to the separatist acts of Taiwan independence forces".

The drills took place in "areas to the north, south and east of Taiwan Island", Li said earlier. Their aim was to focus "on subjects of sea-air combat-readiness patrol, blockade on key ports and areas", Li said.

The previous large-scale drills held in May, three days after Lai's inauguration, were called "Joint Sword-2024A" and lasted two days.

China's coast guard was also sent to conduct "inspections", with a diagram released by the coast guard showing four fleets encircling Taiwan and moving anti-clockwise around the island.

The coast guard of the eastern province of Fujian -- the closest area on the mainland to Taiwan -- also said it conducted "comprehensive law enforcement patrols" in waters near the Taipei-controlled Matsu islands.

Taiwan said four "formations" of China coast guard ships had patrolled the island and briefly entered its restricted waters, but not its prohibited waters.

China has ramped up military activity around Taiwan in recent years, sending warplanes and other military aircraft while its ships maintain a near-constant presence around the island's waters.

"In the face of enemy threats, all officers and soldiers of the country are in full readiness," Taiwan's defence ministry said on Monday.

Lai convened a high-level security meeting over the drills, said Joseph Wu, secretary-general of the National Security Council, who described the exercises as "inconsistent with international law".

He vowed in his National Day speech on Thursday to "resist annexation" and insisted that Beijing and Taipei were "not subordinate to each other". Lai's Democratic Progressive Party has long defended the sovereignty and democracy of Taiwan, which has its own government, military and currency.

Lieutenant Colonel Fu Zhennan, a researcher at the Chinese Academy of Military Sciences, said in a video shared by state media that the drills could "switch from training to combat at any time".

"If Taiwan separatists provoke once, the PLA's operation around the island will make their first move," Fu said, referring to China's People's Liberation Army.

Taiwan's coast guard said on Monday it had detained a Chinese man on one of its outlying islands after a possible "grey zone intrusion", referring to tactics that fall short of a direct act of war. —AFP

Half million still without power in Sao Paulo from storm

SAO PAULO: Half a million consumers in Latin America's largest city are still without electricity three days after a violent gale knocked down power lines and caused a blackout, the distributor owned by Enel said on Monday.

The delay in resumption of power supplies has led to criticism of the distributor from politicians and authorities, with calls to cancel the concession.

Enel Sao Paulo said it would need time to restore parts of the electricity network that was damaged on Friday night by winds of more than 100 km/h. At least five people died in the storm that knocked over trees in the city's streets.

Regulatory agencies Aneel and Arsesp said the company's response to the storm was "much below expectations" and warned that they could recommend allowing Enel's contract to expire.

Enel is facing similar criticism in Chile, whose government said in August it will study whether the Italian electricity distributor's local unit meets the terms of its concession to operate in the country after thousands of customers were left without power following a storm.

According to Enel Sao Paulo, 537,000 consumers were still without electricity as of midday on Monday. —Reuters

Trump pledges 10,000 extra border agents in fight with Harris over immigration

WASHINGTON: Donald Trump pledged on Monday to hire an extra 10,000 border patrol agents if he is reelected as president, as he intensifies his attacks on Kamala Harris on the issue of immigration.

The Republican presidential candidate said he would meet the goal by asking the US Congress to fund a 10 per cent pay rise for border patrol agents and a $10,000 retention and signing bonus, at a rally in the border state of Arizona, an election battleground.

Flanked on stage by leaders of the Border Patrol union, who have endorsed Trump, the former president said: "This will ensure that we can hire and keep the Border Patrol agents that we need."

Trump is locked in a close race with Democratic Vice President Harris ahead of the Nov 5 election. Illegal immigration is a top voter concern, and Trump is seen by a majority of voters as the person best able to address it, opinion polls show.

Trump helped kill a bipartisan border security bill earlier this year that would have funded the hiring of 1,500 extra customs and border patrol agents, and an additional 1,600 asylum officers.

There are currently roughly 20,000 US border patrol officers.

Harris, the Democratic presidential candidate, and President Joe Biden have both blasted Trump for his role in pressuring congressional Republicans to kill the bipartisan border security bill, accusing him of sabotaging it for political gain.

Some 7 million migrants have been arrested crossing the US-Mexico border illegally during Biden's administration, according to government data, a record high number that has fueled criticism of Harris and Biden from Trump and fellow Republicans.

Harris has outlined her plans to fix "our broken immigration system" while accusing Trump of "fanning the flames of fear and division" over the impact of immigrants on American life.

Harris has also called for tighter asylum restrictions and vowed to make a "top priority" of stopping the deadly opioid fentanyl from entering the United States. —Reuters

China, Russia pledge to strengthen military cooperation

BEIJING: The Chinese and Russian defence ministers pledged on Monday to deepen cooperation between their two countries' militaries as they met in Beijing.

Moscow and Beijing have forged closer ties since Russia invaded neighbouring Ukraine in February 2022, an alliance that has drawn anxiety in the West as both countries seek to expand their global influence.

China and Russia declared a "no limits" partnership shortly before Moscow launched its attack on Ukraine and have carried out a series of military drills together since.

Chinese defence minister Dong Jun met Russian counterpart Andrei Belousov in Beijing on Monday and called for the two sides to "deepen strategic collaboration" and "continuously advance military relations".

"Under the strong leadership of President Xi Jinping and President (Vladimir) Putin, China-Russia relations have reached an all-time high... serving as a model for major power relations," Dong said, according to Beijing's defence ministry.

Belousov, in turn, said that "friendly relations" between their two leaders "play a key role in strengthening strategic ties", according to Russian news agencies. —AFP

Afghan Taliban vow to implement media ban on images of living things

KABUL: Afghanistan's Taliban morality ministry pledged on Monday to implement a law banning news media from publishing images of all living things, with journalists told the rule will be gradually enforced.

It comes after the Taliban government recently announced legislation formalising their strict interpretations of Islamic law that have been imposed since they swept to power in 2021.

"The law applies to all Afghanistan... and it will be implemented gradually," the spokesman for the Ministry for the Propagation of Virtue and the Prevention of Vice (PVPV) Saiful Islam Khyber told AFP, adding that officials would work to persuade people that images of living things are against Islamic law.

"Coercion has no place in the implementation of the law," he said.

"It's only advice, and convincing people these things are really contrary to sharia (law) and must be avoided."

The new law detailed several rules for news media, including banning the publication of images of all living things and ordering outlets not to mock or humiliate Islam, or contradict Islamic law.

Aspects of the new law have not yet been strictly enforced.

Taliban officials continue to regularly post photos of people on social media.

"Until now, regarding the articles of the law related to media, there are ongoing efforts in many provinces to implement it but that has not started in all provinces," Khyber said. —AFP

Russia could be able to attack Nato by 2030: German intelligence

BERLIN: Russia could be in a position to attack Nato by 2030 and is ramping up efforts to disrupt Ukraine's Western backers through sabotage, German intelligence chiefs warned on Monday.

Germany is Ukraine's second biggest military backer after the United States.

"In terms of personnel and material, Russian armed forces are likely to be capable of carrying out an attack against Nato by the end of the decade at the latest," BND foreign intelligence chief Bruno Kahl told parliament.

A direct confrontation between Moscow and the US-led military alliance was "becoming an option for Russia", Kahl said.

Kahl spoke at a hearing in the Bundestag alongside the heads of Germany's domestic and military intelligence, who took turns to warn of the growing threat from Russia in the context of the invasion of Ukraine.

"Russian espionage and sabotage in Germany are increasing, both qualitatively and quantitatively," domestic intelligence chief Thomas Haldenwang said.

He listed suspected sabotage activities, including a near miss involving an exploding package and a DHL cargo plane.

The parcel burst into flames on the ground before being loaded into the plane, in what Haldenwang called a "lucky accident", without explicitly naming the suspected culprits.

"If it had exploded onboard during the flight, there would have been a crash and the debris could have hit all the people here in Germany who, openly or secretly, sympathise with Putin," he said.

Russia was also engaged in disinformation campaigns, had deployed drones to spy on sensitive locations and was looking to recruit people, including from the world of organised crime, with offers of money, Haldenwang said.

There had also been a "significant increase" in espionage and sabotage activities from Russia targeting the German armed forces, the head of military intelligence Martina Rosenberg said.

Among the activities undertaken by Russia were "reconnaissance of German arms deliveries to Ukraine" as well as surveillance of military training and armaments projects, she said. —AFP

Lebanon says 21 killed in strike on northern village

Netanyahu vows no mercy after deadly Hezbollah drone strike

BEIRUT, Lebanon: Lebanon's health ministry said at least 21 people died on Monday in a rare Israeli strike on a northern Christian-majority village, far from Hezbollah strongholds, with DNA tests being conducted to identify body parts.

A Lebanese security official told AFP the building "housed families displaced from Lebanon's south, and was targeted shortly after a man had arrived in a car".

He requested anonymity to discuss sensitive matters.

"The Israeli enemy strike on the village of Aito... killed in a preliminary toll 21 people and injured eight. DNA tests are being conducted to determine the identity of body parts recovered at the strike site," the ministry said, referring to a village in the Christian-majority Zgharta district.

The official National News

Agency said Israel targeted a "residential apartment" in the village.

So far, Israeli strikes have mainly been concentrated in predominantly areas, where Hezbollah built its power base in a state wracked by sectarianism.

An AFP photographer at the site of the strike said it had levelled a residential building at the entrance to the village.

Body parts were scattered in the rubble, with Red Cross volunteers searching for survivors in the wreckage while ambulances evacuated the wounded.

The Lebanese army imposed a security cordon in the area, where the strike also sparked a fire, he said.

In another strike outside Hezbollah's traditional strongholds, on Saturday the health ministry reported two dead and four wounded in an Israeli strike on Deir Billa, about 15 kilometres (nine miles) from the town of Batroun on Lebanon's north coast.

After almost a year of cross-border fire over the Gaza war, Israel on September 23 launched an intense air campaign mainly targeting Hezbollah's south and east Lebanon strongholds, as well as Beirut's southern suburbs.

The escalation has killed more than 1,300 people, according to an AFP tally of official figures.

Meanwhile, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu on Monday vowed to strike Hezbollah without mercy, a day after the Iran-backed group's deadliest strike on Israel since the start of the war in late September.

Hezbollah's drone attack on an Israeli base killed four soldiers on Sunday, while another 60 people were injured, according to the Israeli volunteer rescue service United Hatzalah.

"We will continue to mercilessly strike Hezbollah in all parts of Lebanon — including Beirut," Netanyahu said as he visited the base near Binyamina, south of Haifa.

Hezbollah said it launched the "squadron of attack drones" in response to Israeli attacks, including one last week that Lebanon's health ministry said killed at least 22 people in central Beirut.

Since Israel on September 23 escalated its bombing against targets in Lebanon the war has killed at least 1,315 people, according to an AFP tally of Lebanese health ministry figures, though the real toll is likely to be higher.

New Delhi bans fireworks to curb air pollution

NEW DELHI: India's capital New Delhi ordered on Monday a "complete ban" on fireworks in a bid to curb air pollution in a city where levels are regularly ranked among the worst in the world.

The ban is the toughest in a string of restrictions on the hugely popular firecrackers — rules that have been widely flouted.

"There will be a complete ban on the manufacturing, storage, selling... and bursting of all kinds of firecrackers," the Delhi Pollution Control Committee said in a statement.

The order was made in view of the "public interest to curb high air pollution", it said.

It comes two weeks before Diwali, the Hindu festival of lights on November 1, where many see fireworks as integral to celebrations.

The spectacular and colourful festival symbolises the victory of light over darkness, a celebration of the Hindu goddess Lakshmi.

Previous restrictions in the megapolis of roughly 30 million people were routinely ignored.

Police are often reluctant to act against violators, given the strong religious sentiments attached to the crackers by Hindu devotees.

New Delhi is blanketed in acrid smog every autumn, primarily blamed on stubble burning by farmers in the neighbouring regions, but the surge in fireworks around Diwali compounds the problem.

Levels of fine particulate matter — cancer-causing microparticles known as PM2.5 pollutants that enter the bloodstream through the lungs — often hit more than 30 times the World Health Organization's danger limits in the city.

A Lancet report in 2020 said almost 17,500 people died in Delhi in 2019 because of air pollution.

In the past, fireworks were smuggled in across state boundaries or were available under the counter. —AFP

Saudi Arabia eyes electric jets to reach Makkah, new resorts

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia: Saudi Arabia's flag carrier is turning to a cash-strapped German firm for electric jets to service routes to new luxury resorts and the holy city of Makkah, an official said.

The aircraft from Munich-based Lilium will provide direct links to hard-to-reach routes along the Red Sea coast and ferry Muslim pilgrims directly from Jeddah to Makkah, which does not have an airport, Saudia communications affairs manager Razan Shaker said.

"Our strategy is that it will help in bridging the locations and the cities that don't have an airport or that are maybe hard to go to," she told AFP on the sidelines of a logistics forum in Riyadh.

The plans include flying pilgrims to the iconic Fairmont Makkah Clock Royal Tower hotel, near Makkah's Grand Mosque, where "we're working on creating a helipad", she said. —AFP

Iran says 'no grounds' for indirect talks with US

TEHRAN: Iran said on Monday it currently sees "no grounds" for its indirect talks with the United States via intermediary Oman, citing the crisis in the Middle East.

In June, Tehran said it had engaged in indirect talks with Washington via Muscat, despite the two countries having no diplomatic relations.

US news website Axios reported at the time that officials from Iran and the United States held indirect talks in Oman "on how to avoid escalating regional attacks". On Monday, Iran's Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi visited the Gulf sultanate as part of a regional tour in which he met allies and Middle East powers after Israel vowed to retaliate against Tehran's recent missile attack.

"Currently, we don't see any grounds for these talks, until we can get past the current crisis," Araghchi told reporters in Muscat.

The talks, he said, had been halted "due to the specific conditions of the region".

Iran fired 200 missiles at Israel on October 1 in what it said was retaliation for the killing of Tehran-aligned militant leaders in the region and a general in Iran's Revolutionary Guards. Israel has vowed to respond.

Oman has long mediated between Iran and the United States, which cut ties after the 1979 Islamic revolution.

In Muscat, Araghchi met Mohammed Abdel Salam, a senior official of the Tehran-backed Huthi rebels in Yemen.

The Huthis, alongside Hezbollah, Hamas and others, are part of the so-called axis of resistance of Iran-backed, anti-Israel armed groups.

The United States is Israel's close ally and by far its largest provider of military assistance.

Araghchi also held talks with his Omani counterpart Badr Albusaidi over the developments in Lebanon and Gaza, and called for an "immediate end" to the conflict, said Iran's foreign ministry spokesman Esmail Baghaei. —AFP

Israel steps up pressure in north Gaza amid fears of siege and displacement

CAIRO: Israeli forces tightened their squeeze around Jabalia in northern Gaza on Monday, killing at least 10 people queuing for food, according to Palestinians medics, and instructing people to evacuate as they pushed in against Hamas fighters.

Jabalia has been the focus of an Israeli offensive for around 10 days and the military has now encircled the camp and sent tanks into nearby Beit Lahiya and Beit Hanoun towns, with the declared aim of stamping out Hamas fighters who are trying to regroup there.

As the operation has continued, people in Jabalia, home to one of eight historic refugee camps in the Gaza Strip, have been caught between Israeli demands to move south — and Hamas calls not to leave because it was too risky to do so. —Reuters

Italy begins landmark migrant transfers to Albania

ROME: Italy on Monday began transferring migrants intercepted in the Mediterranean to centres in Albania in a European first that has sparked criticism from human rights groups.

The Italian navy's Libra patrol vessel set off with the first would-be asylum seekers on Monday, a government source told AFP, without specifying how many people were on board.

The vessel is to arrive on Wednesday, reported La Repubblica daily. It said the passengers came from Egypt and Bangladesh.

Far-right Prime Minister Giorgia Meloni took office in October 2022 on a promise to stop the tens of thousands of migrants who land on Italy's shores each year from North Africa.

In November last year, she agreed a deal with Albanian counterpart Edi Rama to process some asylum seekers in his country, which is just across the Adriatic Sea — but not part of the European Union.

The five-year deal, estimated to cost Italy 160 million euros ($175 million) a year, covers adult male migrants intercepted by Italian navy or coastguard vessels in international waters, but within Italy's search and rescue area.

They are to be transferred to a military ship for an initial screening at sea.

From there, a determination will be made as to which migrants are from countries considered "safe", which in theory simplifies repatriation.

On arriving in Albania, they will be transferred to a centre in the northern port of Shengjin for registration and health checks, and then sent to a centre in nearby Gjader to await processing of their asylum claims.

The Gjader facility — a maze of prefabricated buildings surrounded by high walls and police guards — includes a section for migrants whose asylum applications have been rejected, as well as a small jail.

The scheme is being watched with interest in other European countries concerned about irregular migration, and is likely to be discussed during a summit of EU leaders this week.

But it has also sparked major concerns.

The centres will be operated under Italian law, with Italian security and staff, and judges hearing cases via video link from Rome.

Migrants considered vulnerable under EU law — including minors, women, people with mental health issues or victims of torture, abuse or human trafficking — will be exempt.

But human rights groups question whether Albania will offer enough protection for asylum seekers.

Amnesty International has described the scheme as a "cruel experiment (that) is a stain on the Italian government".

Sea Watch, one of the NGOs operating ships that rescue migrants in the Mediterranean, said Monday the start of the scheme represented a "dark chapter". —AFP

Nine cops suspended over excessive use of force at protest outside KPC

Two FIRs registered against 12 Sindh Rawadari March participants, 55 TLP members; committee formed to investigate police actions, ensure transparency

By Faraz Khan

In the aftermath of Sunday's violent protests by the Sindh Rawadari March (SRM) and the Tehreek-e-Labbaik Pakistan (TLP) in Karachi's Red Zone, police have registered two cases against multiple individuals involved in the unrest.

Nine police officials, including six women constables, have also been suspended following allegations of misconduct and excessive use of force during the protest outside the Karachi Press Club (KPC).

Sindh Home Minister Ziaul Hassan Lanjar summoned the provincial police chief and directed the forming of a high-level committee to ensure a transparent and impartial investigation into the matter.

The cases filed at the Artillery Maidan police station on the complaint of SHO Zahid Hussain include charges of violation of Section 144, rioting, armed confrontation, firing resulting in injuries, murder, interference in government duties, damage to public property, kidnapping and violations under the Anti-Terrorism Act (ATA).

A total of 12 individuals from the SRM and 55 members of the TLP, including several senior leaders, have been named in the FIRs.

FIR No. 179/24 was lodged under sections 144, 145 and 188 of the Pakistan Penal Code for defying the ban on public gatherings.

Sherry, Bakhtawar condemn brutal action against Rawadari March participants

HRCP says arrested civil society activists must be released unconditionally, SHRC seeks explanation from DIG for use of police force, arrests in three days

By our correspondent

The use of police force to disperse protesters during Sunday's gathering outside the Karachi Press Club has been condemned by several Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) politicians, including senior leader Senator Sherry Rehman, who apologised for the violence on behalf of the party.

"We are a democratic party and rights of citizens have to be protected and respected even if they were in violation of today's [Section] 144. I have spoken on the phone from Islamabad to many who were mistreated, and apologised, and appreciate their understanding," she wrote on X, formerly Twitter.

Bakhtawar Bhutto Zardari, the younger sister of PPP Chairman Bilawal Bhutto Zardari, has also condemned the brutal and arbitrary police action against the participants of the Rawadari March from the civil society organisations in the vicinity of the press club.

"We all condemn and we are all disgusted and ashamed of the violent treatment against peaceful protestors. The home minister has ensured a probe (into the police action) and action will be taken against all those involved in such unprovoked, inexcusable, and unjustifiable brutality."

HRCP's demands

The Human Rights Commission of Pakistan (HRCP) has demanded that the Sindh Rawadari March be allowed to continue assembly at the Karachi Press Club.

In a tweet on X, the HRCP said that it is greatly concerned to learn that at least 37 protesters (including women) associated with the Sindh Rawadari March have been arrested by the Karachi police while attempting to hold a peaceful assembly to demand justice for the murder of Dr Shah-nawaz Kunbhar.

It said police have also attempted to arrest HRCP chairperson Asad Iqbal Butt and warned him not to speak to the press. "We fear further arrests through the day," they said.

The HRCP said the Sindh Rawadari March includes progressive voices from across the province of Sindh, including human rights defenders, trade unions and feminist movements, whose right to protest is protected by the constitution.

PROJECT FOR E-BOOKS, E-EXAMS

SHC takes exception to NAB officer's appointment as education dept's project director

Says hiring an individual from NAB for such an important role is highly questionable as it entails a clear conflict of interest

By Jamal Khurshid

The Sindh High Court took exception to the appointment of a National Accountability Bureau officer as project director of the education department's multimillion-dollar e-books and e-exams projects.

"It is shocking that a NAB officer has been entrusted with the role of a project director for a project involving foreign funds amounting to millions of US dollars," observed a division bench headed by Justice Salahuddin Panhwar in a case pertaining to the authorities' failure to supply textbooks to government students.

The court observed that the appointment of an individual from the Accountability Bureau to such a highly responsible and a departmental oriented (post) role is highly questionable, as it encompasses a clear conflict of interest.

It said NAB officers, whose primary responsibility is to investigate & prosecute cases of corruption and misappropriation of public funds, should not be placed in positions where they may be directly involved in the administration, management and disbursement of money for projects from the public exchequer.

The court also observed that the role of project director, particularly in projects that affect the education sector and involve foreign funding, demands the appointment of an individual having an undisputed track record, who not only possesses strong administrative capabilities but must also possess a clear and in-depth understanding of the local challenges and dynamics surrounding the execution of such public project.

The court directed that it is essential to appoint someone who is equipped with both the expertise and the commitment necessary to carry out and address the needs of the education sector, particularly for children from the deprived areas and backgrounds.

It directed the chief secretary and the secretary of schools education

SHC dismisses plea seeking injunction against approval of proposed 26th amendment's draft

By Jamal Khurshid

The Sindh High Court on Monday dismissed petitions seeking an injunction to restrain the federal cabinet from approving the draft of the proposed 26th amendment in the constitution.

Petitioners Mohanmad Ghulam Rehman Korai and others also sought a direction for the government to make the final draft of the proposed amendment public for debate for at least for 60 days.

A division bench headed by Chief Justice Mohammad Shafi Siddiqui, after hearing the arguments of the counsel, observed that the petitioners' counsel miserably failed to assist the court on the law points.

The court observed that counsel has not brought the recent judgment in respect of the Practice and Procedure Act 2023 wherein a question to challenge proposed legislation was taken up.

It said the counsel was further unable to articulate as to which article would compel the cabinet to share the proposed draft with the bar

Suspect records confession in minor girl's murder case

By our correspondent

A judicial magistrate has recorded a confessional statement of a suspect in a case pertaining to the murder of a three-year-old girl.

The child's body was recovered from a street in Qabail Colony in Block 11 of Gulberg Town on October 9.

The investigating officer produced the detained suspect, Naseer, before the judicial magistrate (Central) and moved an application to record his confessional statement under Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code (CrPC).

After completing legal formalities, the magistrate recorded the statement of the suspect, who confessed to his involvement in the assault and murder of the girl. After the confession, the court remanded the suspect to jail on judicial remand with a direction to the investigation officer to submit a report within a stipulated time.

An FIR has been registered under sections 302 (murder) and 34 (common intention) of the Pakistan Penal Code at the Gulberg police station on the complaint of the child's uncle as her father was in Saudi Arabia for performing Umrah.

Citing the child's initial postmortem report, the police had earlier said she was sexually assaulted and strangled to death.

Sindh signs agreement to provide digital education tools to varsities

By Salis bin Perwaiz

The Tech Valley Pakistan, a Google partner, will collaborate with the Sindh Higher Education Commission (SHEC) and the provincial information science and technology department (ISTD) to equip universities with the essential digital tools needed to thrive in today's modern workforce.

Officials said that this collaborative effort aims to transform education in Sindh and prepare students for future success.

The collaboration agreement was signed in the presence of vice chancellors of 32 universities of Sindh in the presence of Sindh Chief Minister Syed Murad Ali Shah who endorsed the initiative and emphasised the importance of adopting globally recognised tools to elevate the quality of education in government universities.

The CM expressed his delight to witness the partnership between the Tech Valley Pakistan, Sindh education department and SHEC. "This initiative aligns perfectly with our government's vision of transforming education in Sindh. By equipping our students with the latest digital tools, we are empowering them to compete on a global scale and contribute to the development of our province," he said.

This partnership empowers universities under the jurisdiction of the SHEC to leverage Google for Education tools, a suite widely used by 75 per cent of the global workforce. Through Google Workspace for Education, students, faculty, and staff will gain access to powerful communication and collaboration tools like Gmail, Drive, Docs, Sheets, Slides and more.

"This collaboration is a significant step towards equipping our students with the digital skills they need to thrive in the 21st-century workplace," said Noor Ahmed Sammo, Sindh IT secretary.

"By providing access to Google for Education tools, we are not only enhancing the learning experience but also opening doors to global opportunities."

SHEC Chairman Dr Tariq Rafi said he was excited to partner with the Tech Valley Pakistan and Google for Education to transform education in Sindh's universities. "Google Workspace for Education offers a comprehensive suite of tools that will empower our faculty to deliver engaging lessons and prepare our students for success," he remarked.

"We are thrilled to be a part of this initiative," said Paul Hutchings, regional head of Google for Education for Greater Asia, who was present during the signing ceremony. "Google for Education tools have the potential to revolutionise education by fostering collaboration, creativity, and critical thinking."

This partnership with Tech Valley Pakistan and the Sindh government is a testament to their commitment to providing students with the best possible learning experience."

WORLD CULTURE FESTIVAL

Peerzada Salman explores personal reflections in 'Hamlet Ki Khudkalami'

Journalist draws parallels between his life and Hamlet's in unique stage production; shares memories of friend's tragic death, struggle with suicidal thoughts; critiques societal issues such as declining language standards

By Bilal Ahmed

Journalist and art critic Peerzada Salman is certainly not a Hamlet. Unlike the sad figure described by TS Eliot, Salman is not an artistic failure; his successful career and reputation as an excellent journalist suggest that his life is far from the tragic and pitiful existence of the Danish prince.

Therefore, it was both intriguing and somewhat shocking to see Salman draw parallels between Hamlet and his own life in the stage production 'Hamlet Ki Khudkalami', which was performed at the Arts Council of Pakistan on Monday as part of the ongoing World Culture Festival.

The production, written and directed by Salman, featured two characters: the journalist himself, who served as the narrator, and Hamlet, impressively portrayed by young actor Zohair Zubair.

The actor delivered all seven of Hamlet's soliloquies in Urdu, each preceded by a brief narration from Salman, who informed the audience about the context of each soliloquy within the play, as well as moments in his own life when he experienced feelings similar to those expressed by Hamlet or when people around him reflected the ideas conveyed in the soliloquies.

Some connections between the narrator's life and Hamlet's soliloquies were successfully established, while others felt somewhat forced. It also appeared that Salman was describing the seven stages of his life, not through the poem from 'As You Like It', but through Hamlet's monologues.

However, rather than starting with his birth or infancy, Salman began his narrative at the point when he enrolled in an English literature degree programme, where he studied 'Hamlet' in his very first semester.

At this stage, the narrator may have viewed himself as a blank slate, surprised by the appearance of the ghost, much like Hamlet. The first soliloquy captures that shock, as Hamlet struggles to believe that his father was murdered by his uncle Claudius, with his mother Gertrude complicit in the crime.

Salman interpreted the second soliloquy as a reflection of the inability to suppress painful thoughts. He noted that just as Hamlet cannot suppress the distressing thought of his mother's involvement in his father's murder, he too cannot suppress a painful memory of the death of a friend. He recalled the lawlessness of Karachi in the 1990s, when one of his friends was shot in the neck as collateral damage during an attempt on another friend, a policeman. The policeman survived, but the other friend became paralysed, and died after a year and a half.

The third soliloquy in 'Hamlet' addresses the art of acting, as the Danish prince contemplates staging a play to expose his uncle's crime. Salman mentioned that he once aspired to be an actor, but unfortunately, there were no drama academies in the city at that time.

Perhaps the most compelling part of the production came before the famous councils and the bar associations or with the public so that fair comments could be made. The court further observed that representatives of the public are sitting in the National Assembly and Senate. It said the legislative procedure is provided in article 70 to 77 of the constitution and submissions are devoid of such frame. The SHC said courts have been restrained from inter-ing in such matters and in particular in respect of the issue of legislation (competence of which otherwise is not denied) unless it is seen to be demonstrably unconstitutional. The court observed that since it has not yet surfaced as an Act of the parliament, the process of adjudicating it either constitutional or unconstitutional cannot be triggered. It said the petition merits no consideration and dismissed the same.

Sindh Inspector General of Police (IGP) Ghulam Nabi Memon chaired a meeting on performance and reforms of the women and child protection centres in Sindh. Moreover, in a meeting held at the Central Police Office Karachi, proposals were sought for the establishment of a special unit in the investigation department related to organised crimes against women and children, and serious cases. Officials said the committee comprising the Citizens-Police Liaison Committee chief, DIG crime and investigations and others would prepare proposals for setting up a special unit in the investigation department and devise a standard operating procedure for the working of police women protection centres. The meeting was attended by the DIGs of crime and investigations, headquarters, Criminal Investigation Agency, establishment, IT and finance, and other police officers. The participants of the meeting were given a detailed briefing by the AIG for gender-based violence and human rights about the performance and cases of the women and child protection centres.

Sindh police hint at taking action after cop manhandled in Islamabad

By Salis bin Perwaiz

DIG Faizullah Karejo, chief of the Police Training Branch in Sindh, on Monday issued notices after a video went viral showing a Sindh police constable being manhandled in Islamabad.

Officials stated that the constable had travelled to Islamabad to attend the Eagle Course, which he had successfully completed.

DIG Karejo emphasised that no one was permitted to raise their hands against another individual, highlighting the importance of adhering to the code of conduct.

"The police force is a disciplined uniformed body, and following rules and regulations is our top priority," Karejo noted. He condemned the act of insulting and disrespecting police officers, stating that such behavior — including slapping and ridicule — couldn't be tolerated.

DIG Karejo confirmed that the Sindh Police reserved the right to investigate and take departmental action regarding the incident. A thorough investigation was currently underway, led by the relevant commandant in Islamabad, and instructions had been issued for a show-cause notice.

Chairperson Benazir Income Support Programme (BISP) Senator Rubina Khalid and Sindh Education Minister Syed Sardar Ali Shah have agreed to work together for the skill development of out-of-school children, especially those who are supporting their families, to help them achieve financial stability.

The agreement was reached during a meeting in Karachi on Monday. Secretary School Education Zahid Ali Abbasi, Director General BISP Sindh Zulfikar Shaikh, and other officials were also present at the meeting, which discussed the promotion of technical and vocational education in Sindh, mutual cooperation, and the available resources.

Senator Rubina Khalid said that, besides financial assistance, the BISP is working on various programmes related to skill development and technical education, and under the flagship programme, the BISP and the Sindh government can work together to provide vocational training.

She added that the BISP is making serious efforts not only to provide financial assistance but also to make families self-reliant. She also mentioned that the federal government intends to initiate various programmes in Sindh to fulfil the objectives of the programme.

Sindh Minister Syed Sardar Ali Shah appreciated the BISP chairperson's offer of cooperation and praised her efforts. He said that Shaheed Benazir Bhutto's vision for the economic stability and self-reliance of Pakistani women has always been clear. Even today, we are carrying forward Shaheed Bibi's mission for women's empowerment.

He added that there are various challenges regarding girls' education in Sindh, yet the provincial government has taken numerous steps to address them. He mentioned that Sindh is the first province to introduce the syllabus of an accelerated learning programme, under which three thousand centres will be opened where children will receive both academic and vocational education.

He further stressed the need to focus on children who are unable to complete their education due to family responsibilities, and said that by providing both education and technical skills, the youth can be made economically stable.

Shah expressed the provincial government's readiness to provide all possible support. It was agreed in the meeting that the non-functional, vacant, or non-viable buildings of the School Education Department will be utilized in collaboration with the BISP to establish vocational training centres, and a working paper will soon be prepared for the next steps and final recommendations regarding skill education.

Constitutional amendment be taken up after end of current CJP's tenure, says Naeem

JI chief says government wants to install judicial system of its own choice

By Jamal Khurshid

Jamaat-e-Islami (JI) Emir Hafiz Naeemur Rehman has said the government wants to install a judicial system of its own choice through the proposed constitutional amendment and the JI categorically rejects any such attempt.

Addressing a press conference at the Idara Noor-e-Haq on Monday, he said maintaining peace was crucial during the Shanghai Co-operation Organisation (SCO) conference but the JI would not allow the government to continue with its designs behind the cover of the SCO conference.

He said the matter of constitutional amendment should be taken up after the outgoing chief justice of Pakistan has completed his tenure. He urged both the government and opposition parties to shun discussion on the matter in order to ensure transparency.

Rehman said all the state organs, including the army, judiciary, Parliament and bureaucracy, needed to operate within their role prescribed by the constitution.

Talking about the issue of independent power producers (IPPs), he said the capacity charges agreement with five IPPs had been terminated. He added that Rs411 billion, spared by termination of the agreement with five IPPs, should be channelised for the public welfare.

The JI chief said that after the recent development, the charges of per unit electricity should be reduced by Rs15.

He added that consultations with another 17 IPPs to bring an end to capacity charges should be finalised immediately.

Rehman also appealed to the chief of the army staff to come forward and announce that the IPPs regulated by the army would not accept capacity charges.

Highlighting the issues of Karachi, Rehman demanded that the Pakistan Peoples Party's (PPP) Sindh government devolve powers to the local government in Karachi as per the Constitution.

He also alleged post-election rigging in the local government polls as well as rigging in the general elections.

The JI leader lambasted the Muttahida Qaumi Movement for what he said its dubious role for Karachi and its residents.

He said that unfortunately, the PPP government believed in the system of corruption in the province.

He berated the Sindh government, National Electric Power Regulatory Authority and K-Electric over what he termed mala fide practices.

The JI emir reiterated his demand for imposing fair taxation on feudal lords, instead of taking cosmetic measures for farmers and agricultural labourers.

Talking about the issue of interest-based economy, he said it was an open announcement of war against God Almighty. He demanded that the government take solid measures to ensure a Riba-free economy as per the orders of the apex court.

unconditionally, and the Sindh Rawadari March must be allowed to continue its assembly at the Karachi Press Club unhindered.

SHRC takes cognisance

The Sindh Human Rights Commission (SHRC) has taken a suo motu notice of the brutal and arbitrary police action against the participants of a peaceful rally held by civil society organisations near Karachi Press Club on Sunday.

The SHRC under the Sindh Protection of Human Rights Act-2011 is authorised to take cognisance of the instances of human rights violations in the province.

"A peaceful assembly of civil society protesters outside the Karachi Press Club on 13th October, 2024 was met with violent assaults and arrests by the police. The protesters were reportedly gathered to demand justice for the extrajudicial killing of Dr. Shah Nawaz Kumbhar," said the suo motu notice sent by the SHRC to the DIG South.

The notice said that the reported incident raised concerns about potential violations of the fundamental right of peaceful assembly guaranteed under articles 15, 16 and 19 of the Constitution of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

"In view of Section 4(i)(ii) Sindh Protection of Human Rights Act, 2011, the Commission directs you to file detailed comments mentioning the circumstances leading to the use of force against the peaceful protesters, the legal basis for the arrests made during the protest and measures taken to ensure the protection of fundamental human rights, including the right to peaceful assembly. The detailed comments may be filed within three days of the receipt of this notice," said the notice sent by SHRC Member Judicial-I Arshad Noor Khan.

The copies of the notice were also sent to the additional chief secretary of the Sindh Home Department, the IGP, and the secretary of the Sindh government's Human Rights Department.

Qureshi demands action

Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf leader and former MPA Shahzad Qureshi has expressed regret over the baton charge, tear gassing and the death of a worker during a protest of a religious party near the Karachi Press Club on Sunday and demanded legal action against those involved in it.

He said on Monday the brutal violence by rulers on protesting men and women cannot be tolerated in any way. The women of organizations working for the protection of human rights were also subjected to extreme violence, which is unacceptable for all of us.

Qureshi further said that as a democratic party we should respect the rights of our citizens. The administration immediately apologized for the mistreatment of journalists and women, he said, adding that protest is a fundamental right and no one can stop it.

department to ensure that the NAB officer is repatriated to his parent department within 10 days, without fail. The court directed that the vacant post be filled by an officer of impeccable integrity, specifically a CSS officer, being well-acquainted with the education sector, and that the officer should possess a thorough understanding of the unique challenges faced by Sindh's Education Sector, including but not limited to regional disparities in educational access, literacy rates and infrastructure development.

The SHC said a compliance report shall be submitted before the next date of hearing through the Additional MIT-II without fail, else the delinquents will expose themselves to the proceedings against them for the wilful defiance of court's order, as per the relevant contempt of court laws.

The court also inquired the secretary, schools education & literacy department, about the provisions and availability of e-books and e-exams, as it has also come on record that the province of Sindh had signed a certain MoU with a foreign donor agency/bank, agreeing thereby to receive 82 million dollars to launch this project in 2020 up to 2024.

The court was informed that they have received 20 million dollars, out of which 12 million dollars have been utilized.

The secretary submitted that there are other projects under the name of RSU/soft project, wherein they received 42 million Euros from the European Union, as well as funds from JICA (Japan International Cooperation Agency) with regard to the construction of schools through one Maqbool, a contractor.

The court observed that there is a separate wing of the Education Works Department in which all JICA projects have been assigned to one contractor Maqbool. The court directed that the record be placed before it with regard to the tendering process of the subject works awarded to the contractor for the buildings under the JICA scheme and the participation of Contractor Maqbool within the SPPRA Rules.

The court observed that the soft project is meant for digitization and monitoring, and despite receiving millions of dollars and Euros, the Education Department is unable to compile a computerized record or develop any computer applications.

It further observed that to circumvent the law, rules and due process, the entire Education hierarchy has been bypassed by creating different projects, running in parallel to the education department for all such foreign-funded projects and purposes.

The court ordered that complete record of the last eight years be audited by the auditor general of Pakistan and the secretary, Schools Education Department, provide complete details of funds received and utilized for the last eight years in all such foreign-funded projects to the auditor general of Pakistan within one month from the date of this order.

The court also directed chief secretary of Sindh to refer the matter to CMIT-I, headed by Dr. Shireen Narejo, who shall examine the illegalities and irregularities committed, in the said projects, in accordance with law and shall refer the matter to the concerned authority as per the mandate of the CMIT.

The MIT-II submitted reports of district judges with regard to distribution of textbooks and the available reports reflected variations in respect of supply and availability of relevant curriculum textbooks, which shows a different amount of percentage in respect of supply and availability of books regarding various districts for the students studying in the public (government) schools across Sindh.

The counsel for the publishers contends that all the books have accordingly been provided to the concerned district administration.

He has accused the district administration of negligence and said the district administration after receiving the required curriculum (textbooks) could not distribute them to schools and then to the end consumers (the students).

No threat to any coastal area from depression over Arabian Sea: Met Office

News Desk

The depression over the central Arabian Sea has moved further west-northwestward during the past 10 hours and now lies over the west-central Arabian Sea at around Latitude 16.2N & Longitude 61.0E, said a Pakistan Meteorological Department statement on Monday.

It is at a distance of about 1,150 kilometres southwest of Karachi, 1,080 kilometres southwest of Ormara, 1,010 kilometres south of Gwadar, 520 kilometres southeast of Masirah, Oman and 740 kilometres east of Salalah, Oman.

The system is likely to move further west towards the Oman coast and weaken into a well-marked low-pressure area during next 12 hours.

Squally winds with speed of 30-40km/hour gusting 50km/hour are likely around the system centre with the sea condition expected to remain rough till tomorrow.

The fishermen of Balochistan are advised to remain careful and avoid going to deep sea till tomorrow. None of the Pakistan coastal areas is under any threat from this system.

Cameroon seal Cup of Nations finals place

YAOUNDE: Five-time winners Cameroon have qualified for next year's Africa Cup of Nations finals with a 1-0 victory over Kenya on Monday where Boris Enow scored the only goal of the game in neutral Kampala.

Enow scored with a low free kick from just outside the box as Cameroon dominated the contest and did enough to win in the absence of their federation president Samuel Eto'o, who is serving a six-month stadium ban by world governing body FIFA.

The victory moves Cameroon to 10 points from four games in the pool and ensured they cannot finish outside of the top two, which is enough to secure a place at the finals in Morocco. They join the hosts and Burkina Faso as confirmed in the 24-team field.

Algeria could also qualify later on Monday when they play Togo in Lome. Victory will guarantee Algeria a place at the finals but a draw could be enough too depending on the result between Liberia and Equatorial Guinea in Lome.

Nigeria boycott AFCON qualifier in Libya after 'inhumane treatment'

The Nigeria Football Federation said it will fly the national team back home Monday after alleged "inhumane treatment" in Libya ahead of a 2025 Africa

Cup of Nations qualifier.

"Players have resolved not to play the match any longer as NFF (the Nigerian federation) officials are making plans to fly the team back home," said NFF director of communications, Ademola Olajire. A formal complaint by Nigeria has been sent to the Confederation of African football (CAF) whose disciplinary board is now investigating the incident.

The Nigerian team have been held at an abandoned airport in Libya for more than 15 hours since their chartered flight landed Sunday.

The Nigerian embassy in Libya reportedly cannot intervene as they would need permission to do so from the Libyan government.

Captain William Troost-Ekong said the team will not play the game and they will not make a three-hour bus ride from Al-Abrag to Benina, where the qualifier was scheduled to be played on Tuesday, for safety reasons.

"As the team captain together with the team we have decided that we will NOT play this game," he posted on social media.

"Let them have the points.

"We will not accept to travel anywhere by road here even with security it's not safe. We can only imagine what the hotel or food would be like given to us if we continued." CAF said they viewed "the disturbing and unacceptable experiences of the Nigerian National Football Team at an airport in Libya in a very serious light". The statement added that CAF had been in contact with both the Libyan and Nigerian authorities.

"Appropriate action will be taken against those who violated the CAF Statutes and Regulations" the statement concluded. The Libyan football federation denied any impropriety, saying in a statement it had the "utmost respect" for Nigeria.

"There are no grounds to accuse the Libyan security teams or the Libyan Football Federation of deliberately orchestrating this incident," it said.

"Such actions are inconsistent with our values and principles.

"We firmly reject any claims that suggest foul play or sabotage in this situation."

Former African footballer of the year Victor Ikpeba, who accompanied the Nigeria team to Libya, has urged for stiff sanctions against Libya and supported the decision to boycott the match.

"If CAF know their job, Libya ought to be banned from international football," he told AFP. "This is a high-risk country and one really wonders who approved for Libya to be playing their games at home." —AFP

Rizwan's ton steers SNGPL to President's Cup final

By our correspondent

LAHORE: Sui Northern Gas Pipelines' (SNGPL) 20-year old batter Rizwan Mehmood struck his maiden List-A century to help his team beat Water and Power Development Authority (WAPDA) by 74 runs in the first semifinal of the President's Cup One-Day tournament at the Jinnah Stadium Gujranwala on Sunday evening.

WAPDA were bundled out for 259 in 45.3 overs in pursuit of the 334-run target following fighting half-centuries for Khalid Usman and Mohammad Arif.

Earlier, defending champions SNGPL were put into bat and were reduced to 35-3 before Rizwan, batting at No. 5, took his team out of trouble with an unbeaten 116-ball 136 that included 14 fours and a six. He stitched a 111-run fifth-wicket stand with Hasan Rizwan (55).

The 19-year old debutant Saad Masood's quick-fire 44 not out off 27 balls with three fours and as many sixes provided impetus to the SNGPL innings as the unbroken 89-run seventh-wicket stand with Rizwan led them to 333-6.

Ali Raza picked up two wickets while Khalid Usman, Nageebullah and Khushdil Shah dismissed one batter each.

WAPDA lost regular wickets in their reply and lost half their side for 88 runs in 21.1 overs. Opening batter Mohammad Arif was then dismissed for a 72-ball 61 with the help of nine fours to make it 122-6 in 26 overs.

Khalid Usman, batting at No. 8, rekindled WAPDA's hopes with his 73 off 67 balls that saw him hit six fours and four sixes. He was involved in a 57-run seventh-wicket stand with Ayaz Tasawar (30) and an eighth-wicket stand of 43 runs with Mohammad Zeeshan (30).

SNGPL wrapped up WAPDA's innings in the 46th over as Hasan Rizwan dismissed Khalid, backing up his half-century with two wickets.

Hasan Nawaz (2-20) and Bilawal Bhatti (2-45) bagged two wickets apiece while Yasir Shah, Saad Masood and Kashif Ali picked up on wicket each.

Pakistan Television (PTV) will lock horns with State Bank of Pakistan (SBP) in the second semi-final on Monday.

Smith experiment as Test opener over, Green out of India series

SYDNEY: Steve Smith's short-lived stint as a Test opener came to an end Monday with confirmation he will drop down the Australian batting order against India next month, while all-rounder Cameron Green was ruled out of the series.

The 35-year-old veteran Smith moved up to open alongside Usman Khawaja after David Warner's retirement in January.

But after an encouraging start he struggled and will revert to the middle order, likely his preferred number four slot, in the five Tests against India starting in Perth on November 22.

"Pat (Cummins), Andrew (McDonald) and Steve Smith had been having ongoing conversations, separate to the untimely injury to Cameron," chief selector George Bailey said.

"Steve had expressed a desire to move back down from that opening position, and Pat and Andrew have confirmed that he will be dropping back down the order for the summer."

Green had successfully shifted up to number four when Smith opened, but he will play no part in the series after opting to undergo surgery on his spine this week.

The 25-year-old, who has a history of stress fractures, complained of back pain during Australia's one-day tour of England in September and was immediately sent home.

"Whilst spine stress fractures are not unusual in pace bowlers, Cam has a unique defect in an adjacent area to the fracture that is believed to be contributing to the injury," Cricket Australia said.

"After thorough consultation it was determined Cameron would benefit from the surgery to stabilise the defect and reduce the risk of future recurrence."

The governing body said his recovery time was anticipated to be around six months.

"The decision to proceed to surgery is with Cameron's long-term future as an all-rounder in mind," it added.

The surgery will also rule him out of February's Test tour of Sri Lanka and the ICC Champions Trophy tournament.

With Smith set to move

Once again, Marcus Harris, Cameron Bancroft and Matt Renshaw are seen as in contention, as is teenage sensation Sam Konstas.

The 19-year-old surged into the picture after twin centuries in the Sheffield Shield this month.

Harris, Bancroft and Konstas were all included in an Australia A squad Monday for two red-ball games against India A next month.

"We have another three-and-a-half or four weeks until that Test squad is announced and who is in it and in what order," said Bailey. "How they line up will be determined." —AFP

Weak domestic structure major cause for Pakistan cricket's decline

By Sarfraz Ahmed

Pakistan cricket's recurring struggles on the international stage, from the Asia Cup to the recent Test defeat against England, continue to draw nationwide frustration. Yet, after the initial outcry, little seems to change as the same problems surface time and again.

In the wake of Pakistan's crushing defeat in the first Test against England, the Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) announced plans to restructure the national selection committee—an action that appears more about pacifying fans than addressing the deeper issues plaguing Pakistan cricket.

The real cause of the decline lies in Pakistan's weak domestic structure, exacerbated by politically motivated decisions rather than cricket-focused reforms.

The recent trend of preparing flat pitches, as seen in Multan, reflects a defensive mindset. Instead of opting for sporting tracks that would benefit Pakistan's pace attack, the management has often chosen safer, less effective strategies.

Pakistan cricket urgently needs strong cricketing brains at the helm, not political minds, to steer the team in the right direction.

A key factor behind the current crisis is the poor domestic system that stems from non-independent associations shaped by frequent, self-serving amendments to the PCB constitution.

Ehsan Mani's tenure as PCB chairman dealt a severe blow to Pakistan cricket. Thousands of players, young and old, were left jobless when the system was dismantled under the directives of then-Prime Minister Imran Khan.

Unlike such countries as Australia and England, where social security systems provide for the unemployed, Pakistan lacks such economic support. This makes it crucial to maintain a system that offers both employment and competitive cricket opportunities. While departmental cricket has been partially restored with recent government changes, the damage done by its closure remains significant.

For Pakistan cricket to regain its former glory, the PCB must establish a reliable, independent, and democratic domestic structure. Countries like Australia, England, and India have independent cricket boards and associations that operate fairly, which is why their domestic competitions are near international standards.

In contrast, Pakistan's domestic tournaments like the Quaid-e-Azam Trophy and Patron's Trophy fall far behind due to political interference in the selection process. To rectify this, the PCB must conduct fair elections for cricket associations, ensuring that only genuine, functioning clubs participate.

Reforming the domestic system is vital for raising the standard of Pakistan cricket and nurturing a world-class team.

'I still plan to compete and play next season,' says Djokovic

SHANGHAI: Novak Djokovic insisted Sunday that he plans "to compete and play next season" despite suffering another loss at the hands of world number one Jannik Sinner.

The 37-year-old Serb, the holder of a men's record 24 Grand Slam titles, went down 7-6 (7/4), 6-3 to the Italian in the final of the Shanghai Masters.

It was Djokovic's third defeat in his last four clashes against the Australian Open and US Open champion.

However, Djokovic said he has no intention of following career-long rival Rafael Nadal into retirement even though he endured by his own admission "one of the worst-performing seasons in terms of results".

"I don't know what the future brings, I'll just try to kind of go with the flow to see how I feel in a given moment but I still plan to compete and play next season," he told reporters.

Djokovic failed to add to his Grand Slam haul in 2024 as Sinner and Carlos Alcaraz, who claimed the French Open and Wimbledon titles, took possession of the sport's major honours.

However, Djokovic was crowned Olympic champion, winning an emotional

Sunday's loss left him frustratingly short of becoming just the third man after Jimmy Connors and Roger Federer to win 100 titles.

"It's not a live-or-die type of goal for me, I think I've achieved all of my biggest goals in my career," he said.

"Right now it's really about Slams and about still seeing how far I can kind of push the bar for myself."

Djokovic hailed Sinner who at 23 is 14 years his junior. His title in Shanghai was his seventh of the year. —AFP

Dan Bradbury wins French Open after birdie blitz

PARIS: Briton Dan Bradbury conjured up three straight birdies to claim a one-shot win in the French Open at Le Golf National on Sunday.

Bradbury emerged from a group of over a dozen players in contention for the title on a tense final day to shoot a bogey free 66.

Playing in the penultimate group he then watched from the clubhouse as Thorbjorn Olesen and Sam Bainsworth parred the last to finish one shot adrift and share of second place with Jeff Winther and Yannik Paul.

"I guess I'll be looking at flights to Dubai then!" the 25-year-old joked after securing his ticket to the season-ending Abu Dhabi Championship and DP World Tour Championship in Dubai.

BRUSSELS: Major bodies representing footballers and football clubs in Europe on Monday filed a complaint to the European Commission accusing FIFA of abusing its position over changes to the international match calendar and tournament expansions.

Football's world governing body "holds conflicting roles as governing body and competition organiser, which give rise to a conflict of interest," FIFPro Europe, the European Leagues body and Spain's La Liga said in a statement.

FIFPro is the global players' union while the European Leagues brings together more than one thousand clubs from 33 countries around Europe.

Its member leagues include the English Premier League, as well as the leagues in Italy, Germany and France, but not La Liga, which joined the complaint separately.

Citing recent European court rulings related to the breakaway Super League and the Lassana Diarra case, the bodies said FIFA's rules and conduct "harm the economic interests of national leagues, and the health and safety of players in European football".

"A legal challenge before the European Commission has become a necessary course of action to safeguard the European football sector," they added.

FIFA has been accused of a failure to consult over recent changes to the calendar, such as the introduction of a 32-team Club World Cup.

The first edition of the expanded Club World Cup will take place in the United States in June and July next year and 12 European clubs are due to feature.

Many of the continent's leading players will therefore be obliged to participate at a time when they would otherwise have been afforded a long close-season break, a year ahead of the expanded 48-team World Cup in North America.

A recent FIFPro report accused football's governing bodies of putting players' health at risk amid a constantly growing calendar, while some leading players have evoked the possibility of going on strike to protest against the increasing demands being made of them.

Representatives of domestic leagues, meanwhile, have voiced concerns that their competitions will suffer the most as top players will inevitably miss more domestic matches in order to rest, damaging their brands.

FIFA has previously hit back at criticism and accused leagues of acting with "commercial self-interest (and) hypocrisy".

"Those leagues apparently prefer a calendar filled with friendlies and summer tours, often involving extensive global travel," the body said in July after it first emerged that legal action was planned.

Major bodies representing footballers and clubs in Europe on Monday filed a complaint to the European Commission accusing FIFA of abusing its position over changes to the international match calendar and tournament expansions.

Football's world governing body "holds conflicting roles as governing body and competition organiser, which give rise to a conflict of interest," FIFPro Europe, the European Leagues body and Spain's La Liga said in a statement.

The bodies presented their complaint at a press conference in Brussels, saying that FIFA's "imposition of decisions on the international calendar is an abuse of dominance and violates EU law".

FIFPro is the global players' union while European Leagues brings together more than one thousand clubs from 33 countries around Europe.

Its member leagues include the English Premier League, as well as the leagues in Italy, Germany and France, but not La Liga, which joined the complaint separately.

Citing recent European court rulings related to the breakaway Super League and the Lassana Diarra case, the bodies said FIFA's rules and conduct "harm the economic interests of national leagues, and the health and safety of players in European football". —AFP

England captain Stokes back from injury for second Pakistan Test

MULTAN: Captain Ben Stokes was named in the England team for the second Test against Pakistan starting in Multan on Tuesday after recovering from a hamstring injury.

Stokes suffered the injury two months ago and missed the three-match home series against Sri Lanka and last week's first Test, which the visitors won by an innings.

Durham seamer Matthew Potts also returns to the side for the first time since the Lord's Test against Sri Lanka at the end of August. Seamers Gus Atkinson and Chris Woakes are rested.

"Look, it's obviously got to be sensible," said talismanic all-rounder Stokes on Monday after he was declared fit, having been bowling in the nets since before the first Test.

"I'm available to bowl and obviously when I sense the time is right for me to maybe come on and make an impact there won't be any doubts in my mind that I can come on and bowl."

Asked if he could have played as a batsman only, the 33-year-old skipper added: "Those were the sort of thoughts that went through my head at home before we came out."

"I'd written a few teams down with me not bowling, and it just didn't work."

England won the first Test, also in Multan, by an innings and 47 runs on Friday, with Ollie Pope leading the side in Stokes's absence.

England rode on a brilliant 317 from Harry Brook and 262 from Joe Root for a stunning victory.

Pakistan became the first team in Test cricket's 147-year history to lose by an innings after posting a 550-plus total in their first knock.

Under-pressure Pakistan, who have gone 11 Tests without a win at home, named three frontline spinners in their team as they chase a series-leveling win.

They have made four changes, including bringing in batsman Kamran Ghulam for his debut. The 20-year-old has performed well in domestic cricket, having set a national record of 1,249 runs in the 2020-21 season.

NZ into semis after Pakistan all out for 56

DUBAI: New Zealand booked their place in the semi-finals of the Women's T20 World Cup with a comprehensive 54-run win over Pakistan in Dubai.

Pakistan needed to chase their target of 111 within 10.4 overs to keep themselves in knockout contention via net run-rate, but paid the price for their aggressive intent by slumping to 56 all out in 11.4 overs. Despite collapsing to 28-5 after the six-over power-play, the Pakistan batters kept attacking to keep their hopes alive rather than simply settle for a comfortable chase of less than a run-a-ball.

New Zealand's batters had earlier struggled against Pakistan's spin attack, who expertly stifled the run-rate in the middle overs but were let down in the field with eight catches put down.

Suzie Bates was dropped twice in her 28, the innings' top score, and then crucially three were put down in the final over which allowed Maddy Green and Izzy Gaze to scamper nine extra runs.

But while their 110-6 felt below-par, New Zealand were rewarded for a disciplined all-round bowling effort with some assistance from Pakistan's chaotic but understandable approach.

Leg-spinner Melie Kerr starred with 3-14 while fellow spinner Eden Carson took 2-7.

It is New Zealand's first semi-final in either white-ball format since 2016, and they join six-time winners Australia from Group A with India eliminated. They will face the winner of Group B which will be either South Africa, England or West Indies, with the latter two teams playing tomorrow. —Agencies

Pakistan rely on specialist spinners to end losing streak

By Abdul Mohi Shah

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan's cricket think-tank is betting on an all-out spin strategy to level the three-match Test series against England on the spin-friendly pitch of Multan Stadium.

Pakistan has stacked its playing XI with specialist spinners, hoping to exploit the used wicket to bowl out England twice.

The squad includes spin experts Sajid Khan, Noman Ali, and leg-spinner Zahid Mehmoood, with Salman Ali Agha offering an additional spin option. Aamir Jamal is the sole pace bowler included, a reflection of the team's strategic focus on spin.

Azhar Mehmoood, Pakistan's bowling coach, was forthright in admitting that spin was their only path to take 20 wickets and staying alive in the series.

"We can only win by using spinners," Azhar said.

"This time, we are confident that the wicket will assist spin, unlike the last time when it didn't turn even on the fifth day."

He dismissed the suggestions that the switch to spin was a response to the failure of Pakistan's fast bowlers. "That's not the case. We tried to prepare a turning pitch before, but it didn't happen. This time, the conditions are in our favour," he explained.

Pakistan's assistant coach Azhar Mahmood

Azhar also confirmed that Shaheen Afridi and Naseem Shah were sidelined due to fitness concerns and that captain Babar Azam was rested to recharge for the important series ahead, including tours to Australia and South Africa.

Despite Babar's absence, Azhar emphasized his importance to the team. "Babar remains our top batsman but we want him to be mentally and physically at his peak for the future challenges," he said.

"Kamran Ghulam has been brought in to replace Babar, while the rest of the team remains largely unchanged, focusing on spin over pace for the second Test."

Azhar acknowledged England's exceptional fitness and performance in the first Test, praising players like

Harry Brook and Joe Root for their remarkable stamina even after monumental innings. "Their fitness is on another level. It's one of the reasons they were able to outlast the conditions here. Look at Harry Brook the way he was sprinting for twos and threes even after completing a triple century was something amazing. The same was the case with Joe Root who was seen at his best even after scoring double century. It was all about fitness. The tourists nullified the hot weather and lack of conditioning with their fitness," he admitted.

The bowling coach termed selection of the team for the rest of the two matches as a collective decision.

"Everyone sat together to decide on these changes. We know well that if we want to win matches against England we have to do it with spinners. We have got some very good experienced spinners. The selected spinners are the ones having vast experience of bowling on the wickets like the one we have at the Multan Stadium." As for Pakistan, the strategy is clear: Rely on experienced spinners to turn the tide.

"If we're going to win, it will be through spin," Azhar concluded, as Pakistan aim to make the most of the conditions and their experienced spin attack on a crucial Multan pitch.

Pakistan likely to skip British Junior Open

By Waqar Hamza

KARACHI: Pakistan is not likely to feature players in the British Junior Squash Open next year due to Pakistan Squash Federation's acute financial crisis.

Secretary PSF Amir Nawaz has informed the units through a letter that the participation in the upcoming BJO will be on "self-finance basis".

Those who want to participate in the championship will have to either go on self-finance basis or secure sponsorship from their respective associations.

Secretary PSF also mentioned the criterion for the participation in the BJO and stated that based upon their current national ranking, players of U-11, 13, 15, 17 and U-19 categories (Top-10 Boys and Top-05 Girls) may participate in BJO-25 on self-finance basis.

"Players' entries must be forwarded to PSF through their respective squash association till 10 October, 24. Direct entries by the players would not be accepted. Moreover, recommending association would be responsible for bringing the players back to Pakistan immediately after the championship."

"Entry fee (if any) would be paid to the event organisers by the players themselves. Delay (if any) would be the responsibility of players."

"Respective association has to forward players' endorsement proforma to PSF along with Surety Bond of Rs5 million for each individual and an Assurance Certificate."

PSF has been facing a shortage of talented players and does not sponsor average players for such championships.

This was the very reason the federation did not send any player in major international events last year.

Pakistan skipped this world championship for the second time as the country also did not take part in the 2019 edition of the event on the grounds that participation would not be "cost effective".

Pakistan also skipped British Open, Asian Individual Championship, and PSA World Championship last year.

Meanwhile, the federation's decision of not sponsoring players for the BJO has angered the affiliated units as they too are not in a position to sponsor their players.

"This is really strange. If the federation cannot sponsor players for big events, what purpose are they fulfilling then," said an official of a provincial squash association.

He added that there are a number of talented players in Punjab, Karachi, and KPK but they cannot participate in the BJO on their own and the provincial associations too cannot afford sponsoring them.

PCB chief visits Gaddafi Stadium to inspect upgradation work

By our correspondent

During the visit, Naqvi expressed satisfaction with the ongoing work, as the basement construction is now finished, and work on the floors is well underway.

New Zealand's Ravindra excited for India Tests with father in crowd

BENGALURU: New Zealand batter Rachin Ravindra said Monday facing India in Bengaluru in the birth city of his father will be "special" moment with his family cheering in the stands.

The Black Caps begin the three Test match series on Wednesday, but the Wellington-born Ravindra — who called himself "a Kiwi all the way through" — said facing India will be an emotional moment.

"I am very proud of my Indian origin," the 24-year-old told reporters. "To be able to play where a lot of my family is based is something special."

Ravindra has played nine Tests since his debut in Kanpur in 2021 and has become a regular in the national team with his swashbuckling batting. The left-hander enjoyed a prolific ODI World Cup in India last year, and then made an impression in his debut Indian Premier League T20 tournament for Chennai Super Kings.

He called them both "two pretty cool experiences to have", but said playing a Test was "something different".

"Test cricket is the pinnacle," he said, and so it "makes it extra significant because of the family connection" to play in Bengaluru.

"Dad will be here watching," he said. "Those moments, you pinch yourself on the journey".

Ravindra, who plays spin well on turning sub-continent pitches, amassed 578 runs including three centuries 10 World Cup matches in 2023.

In the IPL, he scored 222 runs for five-time winners Chennai, at a strike-rate of over 160.

Having experienced cricket in India, he said he was eager for the challenge ahead.

"We know how passionate the Indian people are about cricket," he said, praising the "hype and the buzz" around the game — and that he was "excited to have a fully fledged three-match series" to play. —AFP

Cummins back, Marsh and Head out of Pakistan ODI series

SYDNEY: Mitchell Marsh and Travis Head were Monday ruled out of Australia's home one-day series against Pakistan next month, but Pat Cummins returns as captain after missing their recent England tour.

Marsh and Head have both been granted paternity leave, opening the door for Jake Fraser-McGurk and Matt Short to open the batting together.

Cameron Green was also absent from the 14-man squad, with the all-rounder to undergo back surgery this week that will sideline him for six months.

Cummins missed the white-ball tour of England and Scotland to rest, but is back to captain the ODI team for the first time since winning the 2023 World Cup.

Marcus Stoinis returns after being overlooked for England, while rising stars Cooper Connolly and Aaron Hardie also make the grade.

"This is our last ODI series before the Champions Trophy (in Pakistan) and the balance of the squad was focused on that as well as continuing to focus on preparation of individuals for the upcoming Test summer," said chief selector George Bailey.

"The one-day side had a great result in the UK particularly given illness and injury challenges."

"We view this is an opportunity to expand on that achievement in preparation for next February in Pakistan." —AFP

NZ's Latham promises 'no fear' as he takes charge for India Tests

BENGALURU: New captain Tom Latham is promising a "no-fear" approach as he takes charge of New Zealand for the first Test against India in Bengaluru on Wednesday.

Latham has the daunting task of turning around his side's fortunes — they were swept 2-0 in Sri Lanka last month — against an in-form India in a country where New Zealand's last Test win came 36 years ago.

"It's about trying to continue doing the good stuff we've been doing, trying to put my spin on things," said Latham, who took over the captaincy when Tim Southee stepped down after the Sri Lanka defeats.

"In India... teams that have done well out there in the past have been quite aggressive towards them."

The 32-year-old Latham led New Zealand in nine previous Tests as a stand-in skipper and said he would be "leaning on those experiences" against India.

History indicates he is in for a difficult baptism as full-time skipper. The Black Caps have won just two Tests in India in 36 outings, in 1969 at Nagpur and in 1988 at Mumbai.

"It's an exciting challenge," Latham said, before adding that he hoped his men would "play with a bit of freedom, bit of no fear", to "try and take it to them".

Latham said he aimed to put India "under pressure", rather than "sitting and waiting for something to happen".

New Zealand's chances of making the World Test

Championship (WTC) final at Lord's next year are receding as they find themselves sixth of nine teams in the standings.

But table-toppers India, led by Rohit Sharma and fresh from a 2-0 sweep of Bangladesh, will begin as firm favourites to win the series.

New Zealand will likely be without leading batsman Kane Williamson in the first Test, as the former captain recovers from a groin injury.

New Zealand will field rookie pace bowler William O'Rourke alongside left-arm spinner Ajaz Patel, who became only the third bowler in Test history to claim all 10 wickets in an innings at Mumbai's Wankhede Stadium in 2021.

India are targeting third consecutive crack at the World Test Championship crown after losing in the final to New Zealand in 2021 and Australia last year.

After facing New Zealand at home, India will travel to Australia for a much-anticipated five-match series between the world's top-ranked Test sides.

"I think against New Zealand it's a safe bet to win all three Test matches, and get those vital (WTC) points," former India batsman Sanjay Manjrekar said on Star Sports.

"You want to get as many (points) as possible before you go to Australia."

Veterans slow bowlers Ravichandran Ashwin and Ravindra Jadeja will form India's spin attack while their pace battery will be led by top-ranked Test bowler Jasprit Bumrah, who took 11 wickets against Bangladesh.

Wicketkeeper Rishabh Pant strengthened the team's middle-order batting when he marked his Test return — following a near-fatal car crash in December 2022 — with a century in the second innings of the first Test against Bangladesh.

The second Test begins on October 24 in Pune, with the third starting on November 1 in Mumbai. —AFP

PPL expands oil and gas production with Adhi South-9 well

By our correspondent

KARACHI: Pakistan Petroleum Limited (PPL), a key player in the oil and gas exploration sector, has announced the commencement of hydrocarbon production from its newly developed well, Adhi South-9, located in Punjab's Pothwar region.

This significant development was reported in a notice submitted to the Pakistan Stock Exchange (PSX) on Monday.

The notice detailed the company's ongoing efforts to enhance its production capacity in a region that has been pivotal for its operations. PPL said, "We are pleased to disclose that as part of our continuous efforts towards increasing production of oil and gas, production has commenced from Adhi South-9, a new development well drilled in the Adhi Mining Lease, which is operated by the company with a 30 per cent working interest. Our joint venture partners, Oil & Gas Development Company Limited (OGDCL) and Pakistan Oilfields Limited (POL), hold 50 per cent and 11 per cent working interests, respectively."

The Adhi South-9 well was successfully drilled to a depth of 3,430 metres and has been completed as a producer based on encouraging log results. Following the successful tie-in of the well with the processing plant, PPL reported that production has commenced at an impressive rate of 530 barrels per day (bpd) of oil and 0.6 million standard cubic feet per day (MMscfd) of gas.

Located approximately 70 kilometres south of Islamabad, the Adhi field has a long history of exploration, beginning in 1956. Over the course of a decade, four wells were drilled in the area, and crude oil production commenced in the early 1980s from the Sakesar reservoir. The Adhi field has since become a significant contributor to Pakistan's energy supply, with major clients including Sui Northern Gas Pipelines Limited (SNGPL) for gas, Attock Refinery Limited for LNG and crude oil, and various LPG marketing companies.

In recent months, PPL has shown a proactive approach to increasing its hydrocarbon output. Earlier in July, the company announced the commencement of hydrocarbon production from the Adhi South-8 well. Last year, PPL began production from the Adhi South-6 well. This series of developments highlights PPL's commitment to meeting the growing energy demands of Pakistan while maximizing its operational efficiency. Industry analysts suggest that the successful production from Adhi South-9 could bolster PPL's position in the market, allowing the company to contribute more significantly to the country's energy needs amid ongoing challenges in the sector.

Oil sector rejects Ogra's proposed margin revisions, calls for higher adjustments

By Tanveer Malik

KARACHI: The oil sector has rejected the proposed revised margins by the Oil & Gas Regulatory Authority (Ogra) for oil marketing companies (OMCs) and petroleum dealers.

The representative bodies of petroleum dealers and OMCs, namely the Pakistan Petroleum Dealers Association (PPDA) and the Oil Companies Advisory Council (OCAC), have opposed the proposed margins on petroleum products.

"We do not accept the proposed margin calculation without consultation," the PPDA said in a letter to Ogra's chairman. They argued that their demands and expectations were significantly higher than the calculations made by Ogra a few days ago.

The association urged

Ogra to consider reasonable margins that account for the cost of doing business, including electricity, salaries, utilities and the high costs of construction and maintenance, which need to be recovered over time from the margins.

They pointed out that digitalization and automation were not part of their demands and expressed confusion over how these costs were included without discussion. The PPDA added that the margin revision has already been delayed despite prior commitments.

The association demanded an immediate revision of the margin to 7.0 per cent of the fuel price, which equates to Rs17 per litre at current rates, to ensure the viability of their businesses. "If the margin is insufficient to operate, it could drive dealers toward unethical business practices, which we do not support," the association stated.

In rejecting the proposed margin, the PPDA insisted that dealers require a net margin of Rs17 per litre, excluding the costs of digitalization. "If digitalization costs are included in this margin, we will not accept it," they warned.

Recently, Ogra recommended an increase in margins for OMCs and petroleum dealers, proposing to the Petroleum Division that the margin on high-speed diesel (HSD) and petrol be raised to Rs9.88 per litre from the current Rs7.87 per litre, representing an increase of Rs1.35 per litre for OMCs. For petroleum dealers, Ogra suggested a Rs1.4 per litre increase, raising the margin to Rs10.01 per litre from the existing Rs8.64 per litre.

Ogra said that the proposed margin adjustment includes an additional Rs0.5 per litre for OMCs and Rs0.25 per litre for dealers. This increase is intended to cover costs associated with the digitalization and automation of fuel pumps over the next three years, based on data provided by Pakistan State Oil (PSO).

The OCAC also opposed the proposed margin for OMCs, stating that it would not adequately address the cost of business.

"Ogra has proposed an increase of only Rs1.35 per litre in OMC margins. This increase supposedly includes Rs0.5 per litre for facilitating the digitalization and automation of fuel pumps," the OCAC noted, highlighting that the cost of implementing digitalization and automation across all fuel pumps is expected to exceed $120 million, making the Rs0.5 per litre allocation insufficient to recover this cost.

After accounting for the increase related to the digitalization and automation of fuel pumps, Ogra has effectively proposed only Rs0.85 per litre, significantly lower than the OCAC's recommendation of Rs4.78 per litre. "The increase of Rs0.85 per litre translates to an 11 per cent increase, which does not even cover the impact of inflation," the oil body stated.

It emphasized that the industry is severely constrained by factors such as smuggling, high financing costs, sales tax exemptions, high turnover tax, insufficient margins, and several other unresolved issues that have been repeatedly communicated to the relevant authorities.

Acemoglu, Johnson and Robinson win 2024 Nobel economics prize

STOCKHOLM: Daron Acemoglu, Simon Johnson and James Robinson won the 2024 Nobel economics prize "for studies of how institutions are formed and affect prosperity", the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said on Monday.

The prestigious award, formally known as the Sveriges Riksbank Prize in Economic Sciences in Memory of Alfred Nobel, is the final prize to be given out this year and is worth 11 million Swedish crowns ($1.1 million).

"Reducing the vast differences in income between countries is one of our time's greatest challenges. The laureates have demonstrated the importance of societal institutions for achieving this," said Jakob Svensson, Chair of the Committee for the Prize in Economic Sciences.

The economics award is not one of the original prizes for science, literature and peace created in the will of dynamite inventor and businessman Alfred Nobel and first awarded in 1901, but a later addition established and funded by Sweden's central bank in 1968.

Past winners include a host of influential thinkers such as Milton Friedman, John Nash – played by actor Russell Crowe in the 2001 film 'A Beautiful Mind' – and, more recently, former US Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke.

Last year, Harvard economic historian Claudia Goldin won the prize for her work highlighting the causes of wage and labour market inequality between men and women.

The economics prize has been dominated by US academics since its inception, while US-based researchers also tend to account for a large portion of winners in the scientific fields for which 2024 laureates were announced last week. —News Desk

By our correspondent

KARACHI: The board of directors of Siemens (Pakistan) Engineering Co Ltd (SIEM) has approved the sale of the company's energy portfolio to Siemens Gamesa Renewable Energy (Pvt) Limited for approximately Rs17.82 billion (around $64 million).

In a notice issued to the Pakistan Stock Exchange (PSX) on Monday, the listed engineering conglomerate announced the decision made during its board meeting on October 11, 2024.

The notice stated, "The board has approved with a majority the sale and transfer of the company's energy business segment on a going concern basis to a non-affiliated Siemens Energy Group entity, Siemens Gamesa Renewable Energy (Private) Limited (the buyer), for an aggregate consideration of approximately Rs17.82 billion as of the valuation date, March 31, 2024."

Siemens Pakistan, primarily engaged in the execution of projects and the manufacturing, installation, and sale of electronic and electrical capital goods, reported that the net book value of its energy business as of the valuation date was approximately Rs17.61 billion (about $63.5 million).

The company clarified that the final cash received from the buyer and any potential gain or loss from the transaction would depend on the net book value as of the effective date (transac-

The transaction's closure is contingent upon receiving necessary approvals from shareholders and other regulatory bodies.

Established in 1953 as a public limited company, Siemens Pakistan operates across several business segments, including power and gas, power generation services, energy management, digital factory, process industries and drives, and mobility. The sale marks a significant move for the company as it continues to streamline its operations in the evolving energy market.

FPCCI, GREF host round-table conference on SCO and Pak's economic interests

By our correspondent

LAHORE: The Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) conference aims to develop a broad-based multilateral policy framework for economic, educational, financial, and industrial cooperation among member countries. The conference will establish an SCO joint chamber of agriculture, commerce, industry, and mines, as well as a local currency SCO investment and trade development bank, independent of the dollar, euro, or British pound for all transactions. It also aims to promote trade in local currencies, a common currency, and barter.

This was pointed out at a round table conference titled 'SCO and Pakistan's Economic Interests', which was held at the Federation of Pakistan Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FPCCI) regional office in Lahore, organized by the FPCCI and the Golden Ring Economic Forum (GREF).

President of the FPCCI Atif Ikram Sheikh highlighted the importance of collective commitment to enhancing Pakistan's role within the SCO. He talked about the significance of the SCO, which includes major countries like China, India and Russia, representing a substantial share of the global population and natural resources.

"These member states collectively embody a vast market and play pivotal roles in regional trade, energy supply and geopolitical stability," Sheikh remarked. The conference underscored the importance of regional integration through enhanced trade, investment, and cultural exchange, especially given the strategic positioning of Pakistan amidst neighbouring SCO countries.

Regional Chairman and Vice President of the FPCCI Zaki Aijaz stressed the need for constructive dialogue to leverage the opportunities

Rupee ends slightly lower against dollar in interbank market

By our correspondent

KARACHI: The Pakistani rupee closed marginally weaker against the US dollar in the interbank market on Monday.

The rupee ended at 277.66 to the dollar, compared with Friday's close of 277.63. However, the rupee gained 10 paises to close at 279.35 per dollar in the open market.

Dealers said that the local unit experienced a slight decrease in the interbank market as a result of an uptick in the demand for dollars for imports and other payments.

According to dealers, the rupee appears to be trading within its current ranges since there is a sufficient supply of dollars, a steady increase in foreign exchange reserves, and strong remittances.

Pakistan's foreign exchange reserves held by the central bank rose by $106 million to $10.81 billion as of October 4.

Remittances from Pakistanis working abroad increased by 29 per cent year-on-year to $2.8 billion in September. These inflows stood at $8.8 billion in July-September FY25, a 39 per cent increase from a year ago.

According to Finance Minister Muhammad Aurangzeb, the nation's foreign exchange reserves will reach $11 billion in the next two weeks, which will be sufficient to pay for imports for 2.5 months.

KARACHI: Stocks closed lower by 222 points on the first day of the week (Monday) amid political noise and foreign outflows.

The Pakistan Stock Exchange's (PSX) benchmark KSE 100-share index decreased by 222.02 points or 0.26 per cent to 85,261.39 points against 85,483.40 points recorded in the last session. The highest index of the day remained at 86,105.03 points while the lowest level was recorded at 85,156.11 points.

Analyst Ahsan Mehanati at Arif Habib Corp said, "Stocks closed under pressure on political noise and foreign outflows."

He said government action on IPPs payments, concerns over the outcome of the IMF's pressure on reforming the agriculture and textile sectors' tax breaks, and delays over the privatisation of SOEs played a catalyst role in the bearish close.

The KSE-30 index decreased by 148 points or 0.54 per cent to 27,011.68 points against 27,159.68 points.

Traded shares decreased by 83 million shares to 477.642 million shares from 560.74 million shares. The trading value dropped to Rs23,474 billion from Rs26,121 billion. Market capital, however, expanded to Rs11.164 trillion against Rs11.156 trillion. Of the 443 companies active in the session, 205 closed in green, 180 in red and 58 remained unchanged.

Maaz Mulla, analyst at Topline Securities, said the KSE-100 index opened on a positive note, reaching a high of 621 points. However, this momentum was short-lived as investors opted to book profits, resulting in an intraday low of 327 points. The index, ultimately, closed at 85,261, down 222 points, or 0.26 per cent.

He said that this profit-taking was influenced by an expected downward revision of earnings for HUBC, which declined by 9.15 per cent following the early termination of a contract, as well as EFERT's corporate results, which fell by 4.1 per cent as the company declared the 3Q2024 EPS of Rs13.47 and the dividend of Rs2.5 per share, which was lower than industry expectations.

Key contributors to the index included HUBC, EFERT, OGDC, BAHF and Engro, which collectively subtracted 532 points. Conversely, positive movements from FFC, NBP, ATRL, and ISL added 326 points to the index.

The highest increase was recorded in Atlas Honda Limited shares, which rose by Rs62.42 to Rs814.35 per share, followed by Reliance Cotton Spinning Mills Limited, which increased by Rs57.57 to Rs650 per share. A significant decline was noted in Unilever Pakistan Foods Limited, which fell by Rs261.5 to Rs17,350.5 per share; Nestle Pakistan Limited followed it, which closed lower by Rs139.45 to Rs6,792 per share.

Brokerage Arif Habib Ltd said that the PSX started the week with consolidation below the 86,000 mark, as the KSE-100 index balanced gains and losses.

HUBC (-8.04 per cent) remained the largest drag on the index, breaking below the significant Rs100 level, adding pressure to the market.

Positive momentum in the refinery sector continues, suggesting sector rotation into refineries as a key theme. Market declines into support around the $4,000 level, which is expected to be viewed as a buying opportunity, said the broker.

WorldCall Telecom remained the volume leader with 41,061 million shares which closed higher by 3 paises to Rs1.21 per share. Hub Power Co followed it with 37,178 million shares, which closed lower by Rs8.59 paises to Rs98.31 per share.

Other significant turnover stocks included Pak Refinery XD, Nergycico PK, Pak Int Bulk, PTCL, Fauji Cement XD, Hum Network, K-Electric Ltd, and Nishat Chun-Pow.

In the futures market, 325 companies recorded trading, of which 187 increased, 135 decreased and 3 remained unchanged.

Ageing Uruguay's vote to drop pension age is rattling investors

MONTEVIDEO: Uruguay heads to the polls to vote for a new president this month, but investors have a wary eye on another ballot: a referendum to lower the retirement age in the fast-aging nation that some fear may cripple the country's finances.

The small but relatively affluent South American country of 3.4 million people has long been seen as a bastion of free markets and private enterprise in the region, which has attracted tech and finance firms, and fast development along its Riviera coastline.

But if approved, the reform would uproot a private pension system in place since 1996 and drop the retirement age by five years to 60, landing the government and the taxpayer with a large bill.

The move echoes popular anger with smaller pension pots elsewhere but would mark a rare instance of a country lowering its retirement age, with nations including France, Britain, Japan and China all recently going in the other direction.

The reform has been promoted by left-wing unions, who argue that it would preserve workers' dignity in retirement by allowing them more money for a longer period. Despite the opposition of most political parties, the unions secured enough support on a petition in April to force the plebiscite, which is binding.

Opinion polls show around half of Uruguayans in favor of the reform, and about 40 per cent against, although that number has been rising. The Oct 27 vote needs a simple majority to pass.

The reform would "make any current economic or social security policy unviable," said Uruguayan economist Maria Dolores Benavente, adding it would mean the country going back to the "unsustainable system" that had been changed in the 1990s.

The rising possibility of a pension reform has led the Uruguayan peso to weaken over 10 per cent against the dollar since April.

"If approved, (it) would compromise medium-term fiscal sustainability," JP Morgan wrote in a recent note, adding that the retirement age drop would widen a pension deficit, while raising lower-end pensions would cost an extra $1 billion per year.

URUGUAY'S 'BREXIT MOMENT'?

The reform proposes scrapping private pension schemes and shifting to a public model, which analysts say would put a bigger debt burden on the state, create legal complexities around transferring pension funds, and put Uruguay's investment-grade credit rating at risk.

Uruguay has one of the region's oldest populations, with a median age around 36 years old, compared to 32 around South America. That creates a potential time-bomb for the economy down the road as a large wave of people retire.

Conservative President Luis Lacalle Pou has called the reform "dangerous and harmful", and says it would put public finances on an unsustainable path, "crushing" confidence. His coalition faces a battle to stay in power against a center-left coalition.

Many voters in capital Montevideo, however, said the 'yes' campaign was winning them over, with the hope it would bring them more money.

"We have meager pensions in Uruguay. Retirees in this country are poor," said 68-year-old educator Jose Luis Correa, adding that he had to keep working out of necessity to cover his costs.

"That's why I support the end to private pension funds," he added. "If they can cut out private pension fund managers, there'll be more for us and future retirees."

Another Montevideo resident in his mid-50s, who asked not to be named but said he was planning to vote against the reform, said he was worried about his private savings and thought the "no" camp was not doing enough to convince people.

Nicolas Saldias, Uruguayan analyst at the Economist Intelligence Unit, said the political classes were largely optimistic the referendum would fail, but may be misreading the mood among voters and could get a shock.

"This could be Uruguay's Brexit moment," said Saldias, referring to the 2016 referendum in the United Kingdom to pull out of the European Union, when the government underestimated the level of public support for leaving.

Starmer vows to cut red tape as he urges foreign investors to 'back' UK

LONDON: Prime Minister Keir Starmer on Monday told global business leaders it was "time to back Britain", as he hosted a major summit aimed at securing much-needed funds to fuel economic growth after post-Brexit chaos.

Starmer told captains of industry that his recently elected Labour government would "rip out the bureaucracy that blocks investment" and pledged to slash red tape.

The premier — treading a tricky path to be both pro-business and also pro-worker, with a series of new workplace safeguards for employees — has placed great importance on the International Investment Summit in London.

He is hoping that the announcement of billions of pounds (dollars) of foreign investment in UK projects will overshadow its chaotic build-up.

Starmer won a thumping majority in July's election but has seen his government's popularity plummet following a series of missteps, with a recent YouGov poll showing only 18 per cent of the public approved of its performance.

The prime minister said his focus is "not the days or hours of the news grid" but on the "golden opportunity" that his electoral mandate presents for delivering his central mission of growing the UK economy.

"Private sector investment is the way we rebuild our country and pay our way in the world. Make no mistake, this is a great moment to back Britain," Starmer said.

He promised that where regulation is currently "stopping us building the homes, the data centres, warehouses, grid connectors, roads, train lines, you name it, then mark my words — we will get rid of it".

"We will rip out the bureaucracy that blocks investment," he added, promising that his administration "will make sure that every regulator in this country" takes growth "as seriously as this room does".

Political stability: key driver of economic growth

By Mansoor Ahmad

LAHORE: Stable governments have played a significant role in helping India and China achieve sustained economic growth, particularly following liberalization and reform policies. Bangladesh has also benefited from stability over the past decade, while Pakistan has struggled due to instability and inconsistent policies.

Official records show that over the last 50 years, the number of prime ministers in India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh, as well as the heads of state in China, has varied significantly due to differences in their political systems and governance models.

Political stability has had a positive economic impact in many countries. India's economic growth has seen both stable and unstable periods. The 1991 liberalization under prime minister PV Narasimha Rao marked a significant shift towards a market-based economy, boosting long-term growth. The government of Narendra Modi has continued to emphasize economic reforms and infrastructure development.

Since 1991, India's economic policies have remained generally stable, focusing on liberalization, privatization, and globalization.

Bangladesh's economy has experienced remarkable growth, particularly in the textile and manufacturing sectors. The long-term leadership of Sheikh Hasina since 2009 provided political stability and ensured consistent pro-business policies. During her tenure, Bangladesh focused on exports, infrastructure development and social programmes, which contributed to its economic success.

China's one-party system has allowed for consistent long-term planning and policy implementation. Since Deng Xiaoping's economic reforms in 1978, China has pursued market-oriented policies while maintaining state control over key sectors. Political stability has been a major factor behind China's rapid economic rise, making it the world's second-largest economy. The country's stable leadership has enabled sustained growth in industrial output, infrastructure, and global integration.

In contrast, Pakistan's economic progress has been hindered by political instability, military coups, and inconsistent economic policies. Frequent disruptions in democratic processes and the introduction of populist measures have undermined long-term development. The frequent changes in leadership, along with fluctuating economic policy approaches — ranging from nationalization to privatization and populism — have resulted in inconsistent economic outcomes. Political instability has also led to economic stagnation, characterized by high external debt, reliance on foreign aid, and a weak industrial base.

Since gaining independence in 1947, India has had 15 prime ministers. Over the past 50 years (since 1974), there have been nine prime ministers, including Indira Gandhi (1966–1977, 1980–1984) and Narendra Modi (2014–present).

Bangladesh, which became independent in 1971, has had 12 prime ministers over the past 50 years, from Sheikh Mujibur Rahman (1972–1975, as prime minister and then president) to Sheikh Hasina (1996–2001, 2009–2024). Most recently, Dr Muhammad Yunus assumed office in 2024.

China, governed by a one-party system under the Communist Party, has had stable leadership over the past 50 years. Notable leaders include Mao Zedong (1949–1976), Hua Guofeng (1976–1981), Deng Xi-aoping (de facto leader, 1981–1989), Jiang Zemin (1989–2002), Hu Jintao (2002–2012), and Xi Jinping (2012–present).

In contrast Pakistan has seen greater political instability. In the last 50 years, it has had 18 prime ministers. These include Zulfikar Ali Bhutto (1973–1977), Muhammad Khan Junejo (1985–1988), Benazir Bhutto (1988–1990 and 1993–1996), Nawaz Sharif (1990–1993, 1997–1999, and 2013–2017), Zafarullah Khan Jamali (2002–2004), Shaukat Aziz (2004–2007), Yousaf Raza Gillani (2008–2012), Raja Pervez Ashraf (2012–2013), Imran Khan (2018–2022), Shehbaz Sharif (2022–2023) Anwaar-ul-Haq Kakar (2024–as caretaker), Shehbaz Sharif (2024-present). Pakistan's history of coup and the frequent dismissal of elected governments have been significant contributors to its political instability.

Consistent economic policies and political stability have been key drivers of growth in India, China and Bangladesh, placing them among global leaders in economic development. In contrast, Pakistan's inconsistent policies have resulted in weaker economic performance, leaving it among the nations with low growth rates.

Shanghai stocks gain after stimulus briefing as markets rally

HONG KONG: Shanghai stocks rose on Monday as traders digested a pledge by China's finance minister to provide more help for the country's struggling economy, while most other markets tracked another record day on Wall Street.

While a much-anticipated briefing on Saturday failed to deliver a hoped-for overall figure on stimulus, Lan Fo'an did set out plans to boost the beleaguered property sector, ramp up borrowing and work to get banks lending more.

Lan said the government would issue special bonds and that it had $325 billion in funds raised that it could deploy in the next three months to achieve its goals.

The announcement came at the end of a volatile week for traders, who were left disappointed by a news conference on Tuesday that lacked any new support and barely any detail on a raft of measures unveiled in late September.

The news out of Beijing came a day before data showed Chinese inflation slowed more than expected in September, highlighting the uphill task leaders have in getting the world's number two economy back on track.

Authorities have come under increasing pressure this year to deploy a 'bazooka' stimulus as a crisis in the real estate sector shows no signs of easing and consumption remains torpid.

Traders elsewhere in Asia also welcomed another record for the Dow and S&P 500 in New York, cheered by healthy earnings from banking titan JPMorgan Chase, which said the US economy would likely avoid tipping into recession. "Significant measures for resolving local government debt and supporting the struggling property sector were mentioned," analysts at HSBC Global Research said in a note.

"These are much needed for sustainable growth. We expect more details and the crucial fiscal number to be unveiled later this month at the State Council and/or the NPC Standing Committee meeting," —News Desk presented by the SCO. He pointed out the significance of trade routes and economic collaboration, particularly in light of the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC). As the global economic landscape shifts, the conference attendees agreed that regional cooperation is essential. The discussions revealed vast opportunities for trade, energy partnerships and infrastructure development within the SCO framework, which Pakistan must actively pursue.

Li Gen (r) Sikander Afzal, chairman of GREF, and Hasnain Reza Mirza, founder and president of GREF, proposed the establishment of several initiatives, including the SCO Customs Union, SCO Industrial Standards Organization, and a unified educational degree equivalence mechanism among member countries. These suggestions aim to further enhance cooperation and streamline economic processes within the SCO.

The conference concluded with a call for proactive policies that align with the dynamic needs of the region and Pakistan's strategic objectives, underscoring the importance of the SCO as a vital platform for fostering regional collaboration.

For Europe's economy, US election risks outweigh upside

For Europe's economy, the Nov 5 US election offers a 'least bad' outcome of a challenging Kamala Harris presidency or a second encounter with Donald Trump which threatens to be yet more bruising than the first.

On two key areas — trade policy and the sharing of rising security costs among Nato allies — Europe expects few favours from a Harris presidency which it sees as "Biden continuity".

Trump 2.0, on the other hand, presents multiple dangers: if he were to pull US support for Ukraine, European governments would need to ramp up defence spending fast; and if he triggered a global trade war, Europe fears it would be the big loser.

Anti-China measures are a rare area of bipartisan agreement in the US election campaign. For Europe's export-driven economy, that raises the question as to whether it can continue to juggle trade ties with both the United States and China.

"Whoever the winner of the US election is, it is unclear whether Europe can continue to benefit from US growth without reducing trade with China itself," said Zach Meyers of the Centre for European Reform (CER) think tank.

"Both US candidates have the same direction of travel — Trump less predictable and perhaps willing to be more confrontational with the European Union."

For ASML, a Dutch supplier of hi-tech microchip manufacturing equipment, the risk of collateral damage from US efforts to "contain" China is all too real — it already faces export bans on half its products to China after a US-led campaign.

"There's a strong will in the US to seek more restrictions — I think it's very clear and it's something that's bipartisan," ASML CEO Christophe Fouquet told a conference last month. "And so I think whatever happens in November, this will stay."

Half of Europe's output comes from trade, double the rate in the United States, while the region's 30 million manufacturing jobs — compared to only 13 million in the United States — mean it is highly vulnerable to anything that restricts commerce.

MORE TARIFFS?

Support for free trade in Washington has evaporated in the past decade. Joe Biden chose not to scrap outright tariffs levied in Trump's first presidency and has added his own focus on US jobs with the Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) subsidies.

While Harris is seen pursuing a path similar to Biden, Trump has threatened to go further with across-the-board tariffs of 10-20 per cent on all imports — including those of Europe, with whom America still has annual trade worth over one trillion euros.

Spanish olive producers have seen their exports to United States, once their main foreign market, slump by 70 per cent after Trump in 2018 imposed tariffs which remain in place despite World Trade Organization (WTO) rulings against them.

"If Trump wins, this could get worse and we think it will be difficult to resolve this without pressure from Europe," Antonio de Mora, head of ASEMESA, the body which represents Spain's olive exporters, told Reuters.

For those European companies with US presences, the added uncertainty is whether Trump will follow through on promises to scrap Biden's IRA green energy subsidies.

German machinery firm Trumpf, which employs 2,000 US staff and supplies equipment for electric vehicle batteries and solar, told Reuters it was not expanding those activities in the United States due to uncertainty about the election outcome.

GROWTH DAMPENER

The US election could also have major implications for the defence budgets of European governments struggling with debt levels inflated by post-pandemic recovery spending.

Again, the question is more one of timing than destination: Harris is expected to pursue US pressure on Europe to pick up more of the tab for regional security while the lack of clarity around Trump's commitment to Ukraine hugely ups the ante.

"In our view, a Trump presidency increases the risk that spending needs to be ramped up sooner, while a Harris presidency may give Europe more time," UBS analysts said in a note.

Thus, while a Harris presidency could have little measurable impact on Europe's economy, the downside risks of a second Trump term in office are clearly tangible.

Goldman Sachs economists estimate that if Trump went ahead with his tariffs, their direct effect plus the trade uncertainty they would generate could shave one percentage point off output in the 20 countries of the euro area — more than the weak 0.8 per cent growth they are forecast to eke out this year.

Any economic growth benefits to be had if an ebbing US commitment to Ukraine forced Europe to boost defence spending would be cancelled out by the hit the regional economy would take from the resulting geopolitical risk, they noted.

The European Commission has a closed-door team of officials to study how the EU will be affected by the election outcome. But any policy conclusions they draw will need to secure an EU consensus — which, as shown by the bloc's divisions over how to deal with Chinese electric vehicle imports, can be elusive.

Pro-European optimists suggest the US election — especially in the event of a Trump victory — could have a salutary shock effect of finally spurring the region to adopt the type of deep reforms proposed by former ECB chief Mario Draghi last month.

"The prospect of more tense transatlantic relations should encourage the EU to address the reasons why its economic size has been shrinking relative to the US economy," noted CER. —Reuters
